BANDIT HUNT IN BOSTON

The two bandits who broke into two houses in Lexington and had a pistol battle with Policeman Patrick J. Maguire escaped to Boston, in the opinion of the police of Lexington. Chief Franks of Lexington after an all-night and morning search of the Liberty Hill section of East Lexington for the men, one of whom is believed to have been wounded by Maguire's pistol, said that he was forced to conclude that the men got away.

The police of Boston were asked to look for the fugitives. The search in this city was taken up to-day and the officers have been instructed to look for a wounded man in company with another man. It is believed that the two men would stick together.

It was thought for a time early to-day that the police, who were assisted by several citizens, had the bandits trapped. Two men, who were seen late last night by Harvey Bacon, a Boston man, in East Lexington, answered the description of the bandits. The couple disappeared in the woods.

Garrison Home Entered.

Several people living in the neighborhood saw the two men enter the woods and spread the alarm. One of the men was evidently badly wounded and so weak from loss of blood that he had to be half carried by his companion. It was at once suspected that they were the burglars.

While the men of the neighborhood were gathered and awaiting the arrival of the police, the suspects entered the thick woods, and were soon lost to view. Within half an hour, a score of men had collected, and a guard was hastily thrown about the woods where the supposed robbers were seen to enter. No attempt was made to rush them in the darkness, but at daylight, a pistol battle or the surrender of the men seemed imminent.

From the description of the two men, it is almost certain that they were the robbers, and the crippled condition of one leads to the belief that one of Patrolman McGuire's bullets took effect.

Three pistol reports were heard in the vicinity of the Boston & Maine station at East Lexington. Following this, an extra detail of the Lexington police was sent out, but no explanation for the shots could be obtained and the police were unable to locate the place from which they were fired in the darkness.

One Crippled by Shot.

It has developed that the house of William Lloyd Garrison, Jr., on Highland avenue, Lexington, was also entered Monday night. The Garrison house is only a short distance from the Gove house, and like the Gove house, is unoccupied, the family being absent in Europe.

All valuables had been put in a safe deposit vault, so the burglars failed to find anything. It is supposed they went directly from the Garrison house to the Gove house, which is about 100 yards away. Entrance was gained by forcing a window.

HUNDREDS IN CRASH DURING BULL FIGHT

MADRID, Sept. 21.—During a bull fight to-day at Mejorada the grand stand collapsed bearing hundreds of occupants, and it is feared that a score or more have been killed. The scene was one of terrible confusion. The rending of the timbers gave warning, and while the mighty structure sagged, men, women and children arose from their seats and with screams attempted to fight their way through the exits. The spectators were thrown into a panic and hundreds fought and battled. Many were badly wounded by being trampled upon before the building completely toppled. Soldiers were rushed to the field to assist in the rescue work.

THREE INDICTED IN POISON LIQUOR CASE

PROVIDENCE, Sept. 21.—Three persons were indicted for manslaughter to-day in connection with the Westerly liquor poisoning cases. The indictments were returned by the Grand Jury sitting at West Kingston. They charge the three with being responsible for the deaths of Daniel Sullivan and Michael Reilly, to whom they sold liquor, after drinking which they died from wood alcohol poisoning. The indictments are against John and Catarina Cisco and John Di Santi. To-day's indictments are the first real steps toward placing responsibility for any of the fourteen deaths supposed to have been caused by drinking poisoned whiskey.

THREE RALLIES FOR O'CONNELL TO-NIGHT

Congressman O'Connell will hold three open air rallies this evening. He will speak at Mercer and Ninth streets and at Andrew square, South Boston, and at Edward Everett square, Dorchester. The rally scheduled for this evening in the wardroom, Meeting House Hill, Ward 20, in the interest of Congressman O'Connell, has been postponed until Friday evening, when there will be a big mass meeting under the auspices of the Young Men's Democratic Club of Ward 20, at which the Congressman and several noted speakers will be heard.

RADICAL TEACHING SCORED BY SHELDON

Professor Henry C. Sheldon opened the sessions of the School of Theology, Boston University, to-day with an address upon "Theological Assets." He scored many of the radical teachers in the Christian Church. President Huntington welcomed the students and outlined the policy of the school for the coming year.

WOMEN JEER ETHEL LE NEVE IN THE STREET

LONDON, Sept. 21.—Following the police court hearing of Dr. H. H. Crippen and his alleged accomplice, Miss Ethel Le Neve, charged with the murder of Crippen's wife, Belle Elmore, to-day, the American doctor was committed to jail to await trial for his life before the Central Criminal Court. Miss LeNeve was also remanded.

Crippen will be formally charged with his wife's murder when arraigned and Miss LeNeve will be hcarged with being an accessory after tre fact. Barrister Newton, counsel for both, did not present his defence at he hearing, saying he would reserve it for the formal murder trial.

A crowd of women and girls followed the "Black Maria," containing Miss LeNeve, on its way to court and yelled their opinion of her as the carriage rolled along. A crowd of men and women were clustered about the door of the court. As the pale and trembling girl was led shrinkingly in, the crowd hooted and jeered at her. Miss LeNeve held an open umbrella before her face and partially escaped observation, but she could not escape the torment of abuse which was heaped upon her. The crowd was the largest in the history of the trial.

The financial affairs of Crippen were gone into. It developed that the "Curnow" to whom Dr. Crippen's $185 check was made payable is Miss Marion Curnow, who succeeded Crippen as manager of the London office of the Munyon medical concern.

The manager of a bank testified that Mrs. Crippen notified the institution on December 15, 1909, of the withdrawal of the joint account which she maintained there with her husband.

Miss Curnow took the witness stand. She testified that the poison alleged to have been purchased by the doctor, traces of which were found in the mutilated body in the cellar, was not used in the office. She admitted that Crippen frequently bought drugs for his own use. Miss Curnow said that Dr. Crippen after giving her the $185 check said:

The witness further testified that Crippen left several packages with her with instructions to give them to Miss Leneve "if anything happened to him."

1,500 AT O'CONNELL NOONDAY RALLY

A large noon-day rally was held to-day by Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell at the corner of A and Summer street extension. More than 1,500 men gathered to hear the Congressman talk about the tariff issues, in which he paid particular attention to the wool schedule.

O'CONNOR RALLIES.

Senator Patrick O'Connor, candidate for renomination on the Democratic ticket in the Sixth District, comprising Wards 13, 14, 15 and 16, will hold two open-air rallies this evening, one at the corner of Ninth and Lark streets, at 8 o'clock, and the other at the corner of D and Fifth streets, at 8:30 o'clock. He will talk on his labor record.

GILMAN IS SLATED TO LEAD G.A.R.

ATLANTIC CITY, Sept. 21.—When the G. A. R. convention assembled to-day it was the opinion of a large number of veterans that State Commander John E. Gilman of Boston would be chosen commander-in-chief, and that the command of the Sons of Veterans would be given to another Boston man, ex-Alderman Fred E. Bolton.

The strongest rival of Commander Gilman is Colonel John McElroy of Washington, and though his supporters declare they will not abandon hope of "landing" him until the official count has been made on the floor of the convention, their confidence is waning.

It is said that the New York delegation has agreed to support Commander Gilman in return for a pledge of votes for Rochester as the place of next year's encampment.

Will Have Clear Majority.

With the States already lined up for him, this will give the New England candidate, it is figured, a clear majority.

Bolton seems to have practically a clear field in his ambition to head the Sons of Veterans.

Last night the veterans were welcomed to the city at a great meeting on the million-dollar pier. Governor Fort greeted the veterans on behalf of the State and Mayor Stoy gave them the freedom of the city. Commander in Chief Samuel R. Van Sant of Minnesota made the principal response and was followed by the presidents of the other national organizations meeting with the G. A. R.

To-day comes the annual review in which "the boys" delight to participate. Vice-President James S. Sherman reviews the veterans with Commander-in-Chief Van Sant. Another guest of the G. A. R. on the reviewing stand is Lieutenant-General Nelson A. Miles, U. S. A., retired.

Lost 6,000 in Past Year.

The Grand Army lost nearly 6,000 members during the past year by death. Because of the possible exhaustion from a long march the route is practically confined to Atlantic and Pacific avenues, between Rhode Island avenue on the east and Ohio avenue on the west.

In the matter of the next place of meeting, the question of railroad rates may largely enter into the contest. There is almost a unanimous protest against the railroads in general for their alleged failure to give the veterans a satisfactory rate from distant points. It was said to-day at the national headquarters that if Rochester, N. Y., can guarantee better rates than given to Atlantic City, the New York State town may secure the next encampment. Otherwise it is said the honor may go to the Central West.

Welcomed by Governor Fort.

Governor Fort said:

"The State of New Jersey welcomes to this city the Grand Army of the Republic. I have had occasion many times to welcome many people, but never have I taken greater interest nor greater pride.

"We have a great country—great because you made it so. Our fathers made a republic, and you preserved it.

"State's rights threatened long to disrupt this magnificent temple of liberty, but you saved the country by reminding the men of the South that a strong central government was necessary to the perpetuation of this nation.

"We are stronger since you won your battle and we are growing stronger day by day. And as we grow stronger we will understand that more centralized power will be necessary.

"The South realizes that what you did was as good for them as for the nation at large.

"But be this understood: There is more credit due to those men who fought in gray than to the man of either side who stayed at home. It is greatly to your credit that you defeated men as good and as brave as they.

"The war is over and I am in favor of forgetting it. I believe that partisan reference in our school histories should be eliminated and the children of this and the coming generations be taught that there is no sectional feeling."

Streets in Gala Array.

Martial music and marching bodies filled the avenues of the resort all day. Special trains are coming in frequently and the new arrivals are dazzled by the glare of the illumination on Atlantic avenue and the lavish decorations, the street in sections almost being canopied with flags. All are taken in hand by reception committees and escorted with music to the various headquarters which are scattered over several miles of territory.

Commander D. C. Hurd of the New York Department, counts 1,000 men here to-night, but the most will come in tomorrow in time for the parade.

Railroads have sent every available car to the terminals in Philadelphia to move the multitude of commands which are to center there from all points on their way to the coast. Stewart L. Woodford, former Minister to Spain and former commander in New York, and General Daniel E. Sickles, who also filled the Spanish mission and headed the National Encampment as commander, are to turn out with the Empire State's division.

GIRL AGAIN OFF ON SWIM TO THE LIGHT

Annie Morecroft, the fifteen-year-old Revere swimmer, started on her third attempt to-day to swim to Boston Light.

Watched by admiring hundreds, she dived from the Warren bridge at 10:40. The temperature of the water was 60 degrees. As the girl started she was cheered loudly by the spectators, and particularly by a fishing excursion of 100 Knights of Columbus, which was just putting out.

Accompanied by her trainers in a power dory the girl breasted the inner harbor waters and struck out on her long, hard swim.

Before starting, she said:

"I shall do my best to make the Light to-day. Twice I have been handicapped, but this time I am perfectly fit. I expect to make the distance."

GLOUCESTER MAN IS CONFESSED FIREBUG

GLOUCESTER, Sept. 21.—Despite the fact that the Essex Grand Jury had failed to find a true bill against him for arson, John Powers is again in the hands of the police and all upon his own insistence that he is not innocent, as the Grand Jury said he was. Soon as he was let out of jail, where he had been since last April, Powers started for Gloucester. Upon his arrival he told the officer in charge at the station that he did set fire to the Gorton-Pew Fishing Company's building and that he also intended to burn up half of the town. He was locked up.

FOIL PLOT TO KILL JAPAN'S EMPEROR

TOKIO, Japan, Sept. 21.—A plot has been discovered to assassinate Emperor Mutsuhito of Japan, and the plotters are already under arrest, according to a sensational publication in an afternoon newspaper here to-day. The startling story appeared in the Hochi Shimbun, which stated that the men would be given secret trials.

EXTRA! EXTRA! GOLD FOUND IN CAMBRIDGE

A mineral believed by the laborers to be gold was discovered in East Cambridge to-day by men digging on Otis street. The excitement of the men when they discovered a number of small pieces of sparkling minerals attracted the attention of passersby and soon hundreds of men, women and children were digging in the earth for the shining objects. The laborers who first discovered the "gold" were employed by the Cambridge Electric Light Company in digging a trench.

HAMPDEN ROAD APPROVED.

The Railroad Commissioners have decided in favor of the proposed Hampden railroad and a certificate was issued to-day. The road, if constructed, would serve Springfield, Holyoke and Chicopee and the eastern section of the State. A connection with the Central Massachusetts division of the Boston & Maine seems feasible, the commissioners say.

TAWNEY IS DEFEATED BY INSURGENTS

ST. PAUL, Sept. 20.—Representative James A. Tawney of the First Minnesota District was defeated for renomination on the Republican ticket by Sidney Anderson, insurgent, at the State primaries. Anderson's majority is approximately two thousand.

Gifford Pinchot and Francis J. Heney, both friends of Theodore Roosevelt, had made campaign speeches against Tawney and his stand-pat connections were against him.

H. L. Buck was nominated by the Democrats. F. C. Stevens, another of Minnesota's three stand-patters, is probably defeated, although the count of the ballot still is incomplete. F. M. Nye, brother of the late Bill Nye, the third, was renominated. He is from Minneapolis. Otherwise there will be no changes in Minnesota's slates for the Fall elections.

The main interest of the primaries centred in the three districts, but in the sixth district there also was a fight of some importance. Congressman Lindbergh, an insurgent, was opposed at the polls by P. E. Barry, a stand-patter, but won out.

Congressman Hammond, of the second district, the lone Democratic representative of the State was renominated. A. L. Ward will oppose him. Congressman Steenerson, in the Ninth District, was renominated.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—With the news from Minnesota that Representative Tawney has been defeated for renomination, the report was persistently circulated to-day in semi-official circles that President Taft will select him to succeed Secretary of the Interior Ballinger. Men close to the administration freely predicted that Ballinger will soon be out of the cabinet and Tawney installed in his stead.

LEO F. M'CULLOUGH LEAVES DEER ISLAND

Leo F. McCullough, the former Common Council president who received a two years' sentence at Deer Island for misappropriating $200 of the city's funds, was paroled to-day. He left the institution early, and on arriving in Boston went at once to the home of his mother, Mrs. Julia McCullough, in the Upham's Corner section of Dorchester.

Several old associates called to see him, but he denied himself to all. His mother met visitors for a time to-day, but after a while the doorbell rings were not answered by anyone.

"I'm glad it's all over," Mrs. McCullough said to an AMERICAN reporter. "I've seen Leo this morning. He came out to see me. I don't want to say anything more. To talk about this case would bring things all back to me. Now that the matter is ended, I want to let it rest."

SEMINARI RALLIES.

Joseph Seminari, the Democratic candidate for the House in Ward 9, will hold two open-air rallies this evening, one at Genessee street and Harrison avenue, at 8 o'clock, and the other at Middlesex and Compton streets, at 8:45 o'clock.

NEW EVIDENCE IN STRANGE VERMONT DEATH MYSTERY

A new and startling turn was taken to-day in the mysterious murder of William Heath in the home of Mrs. J. Marshall Dodge, a wealthy widow of Lunenburg, Vt., when Lawyer Harry Blodgett, junior counsel for the woman, declared to a reporter of the BOSTON AMERICAN while in this city that a third person was in the house at the time of the crime, and that this third person, and not Mrs. Dodge, killed the man.

Mr. Blodgett declared that the guilty person is known, and that before the case is ended he will be named and arrested. He asserted that when this is brought about one of the weirdest tragedies that ever took place in Vermont will be disclosed.

GIVES OUT FIRST INSIDE INFORMATION.

Shortly after noon to-day Mrs. Dodge, who is being guarded at her home by deputy sheriffs, collapsed because of the espionage, and the authorities were compelled to call medical assistance, a dispatch from Lunenburg says. Two women nurses were sent from St. Johnsbury to take care of the distressed woman.

The revelations made by Mr. Blodgett to-day constitute the first inside information that the public has learned of the mysterious shooting since the crime was disclosed. The shooting took place last Saturday, but the facts did not reach the public until Monday.

This is Mr. Blodgett's story which he related to-day for the first time:

"No woman in the world is more innocent of crime than Mrs. Dodge. Her story is true. She didn't even know that the revolver that killed Heath was loaded, nor did she know whether it was in the top or the bottom of the bureau until it was exposed when the drawer flew open as Heath was moving the bureau to get at the wall behind it.

Says Beggar Entered House.

"The front door of the house was open. In the hallway, in plain sight of the street, was the bureau, near the doorway of the room where Heath was at work.

"What easier thing is there in the world than the entrance of a man to the house without the knowledge either of Heath or Mrs. Dodge, who was at work in the kitchen in the L part of the building?

"We will prove that Mrs. Dodge was seen at the window in the kitchen in plain sight of the street at the very minute of the shooting.

"This was far away from the front door. We claim that a man came to the house expecting to ask for food. After surveying the premises he saw the possibility of getting something more than a lunch and entered the front door into the hall. This was after he had seen Mrs. Dodge at the kitchen window and had discovered the open front door.

Intruder Got Revolver.

"The bureau was the first thing that arrested his attention and he began at once to ransack the drawers. The only one of the three drawers that was open disclosed the pistol. This weapon he at once pocketed. Then, as he looked into the bedroom he saw the safe. Becoming bolder, with the revolver in his possession, he started to go to the safe. He then discovered Heath. He had not suspected that there was a man in the house.

"The painter was at work on the baseboard near the safe. His back was toward the intruder. The man who purposed to rob Mrs. Dodge of the contents of the safe was frightened at first, then became bold and used the revolver, hoping to open the safe and get away. Three shot were fired; one killed Heath.

"Mrs. Dodge, in the kitchen, heard the shots and rushed toward the bedroom, but she had a longer distance to go than did the murderer to make his escape, for we will show that he went through a window in the bathroom that separates the bedroom from the kitchen, before Mrs. Dodge had comprehended what had happened.

"We will claim that Heath was shot by this man who, we will contend, was familiar with the town Lunenburg. We will show when this case comes to trial that Heath was attempting to arise from his kneeling posture to protect the property of his employer when he met his death. We will prove that the man escaped, not by the front door, but by the window as I have indicated.

Went Away Unseen.

"Neither the Rev. Mr. Howard, who lives opposite, nor his wife could have seen the man leave the house, for that window is on the opposite side of the Dodge house. That no one saw a strange person enter the home of Mrs. Dodge does not signify, for it is not to be supposed that the sole ocupation of the neighborhood was the espionage of the Dodge home on that particular day.

"I say that that man entered unseen, and went away unseen by any of the persons who have already come forward and volunteered information to the government.

"We will prove that our solution of the mystery is correct and, further, we will name the actual murderer before the case is closed and then one of the most weird and sensational crimes in the history of the State of Vermont will be disclosed.

"Mrs. Dodge is one of the most estimable women in northern Vermont, where the whole life of everyone is as an open book.

Will Fight to the End.

"We are going to fight this case to the end on our own lines of defense, but, at the outset, we are waiting to see what the State proposes to prove; then we will acquit Mrs. Dodge and produce evidence which will lead to the arrest of the actual murderer, if he can be found.

"I cannot, of course, tell you in detail all of the facts that Harland B. Howe, my associate in the defence, and I have secured in the way of evidence, but you may safely say that Mrs. Dodge will never be convicted, and you may add that the real murderer will be brought to justice."

This is Mrs. Dodge's own story of what happened on the day of the tragedy:

"I know that I am under arrest and charged with this crime. It is awful to think of it, but I must bear up and be strong.

Mrs. Dodge's Own Story.

"I am going to fight for my good name, for that of my family. I am guiltless, and I am going to be cleared of all blame and of the slightest vestige of suspicion.

"I was born and raised among these hills, and I love them dearly. This is the only time in my whole life that I have ever been in trouble. It is all a mistake, a dreadful mistake.

"Since my husband's death I have lived here practically alone.

"Heath was working for me in the room leading from the sitting room. He had been painting and papering the house. I was, at that time, about 11:45 last Saturday morning, ironing in the kitchen. I heard the shots and ran to the room.

Heart Near Bursting.

"Poor Heath lay in a pool of blood. His face was against the floor, and I turned him over. The sight nearly unnerved me, but, mustering all my courage, I ran to the telephone.

"I couldn't get any connections, and rushed out of the house. I met Mrs. H. C. Howard, who lives next door, and told her what had happened; then a great many people came and finally the officers. I helped them all I could, and Sunday they came and told me I must not leave the house, because I was under arrest.

"Only a woman, and a woman with a heart, can comprehend what this means to me. It seems as though I was being crushed and that my very heart would burst, but I cannot help it."

ROOSEVELT DELIGHTED AT VICTORY

UTICA, N. Y., Sept. 21.—Merwin K. Hart, former member of the Assembly, who with Senator Frederick N. Davenport left the fight of the progressives in Oneida County against the "old guard" and Vice-President Sherman, in yesterday's primary battle, received the following telegram to-day from Colonel Roosevelt:

"I need not say how pleased I am. I congratulate you and your fellow progressives with all my heart.

"THEODORE ROOSEVELT."

Corrected returns to-day indicate that the Roosevelt supporters in Oneida county will have nine delegates in the State convention while the old guard will have fourteen. Vice-President Sherman is in Atlantic City and thus far it has been impossible to learn how he regards the rebuff which the Republican electors of his home county gave him, though it is known he has been in communication with his chief supporters here.

Beaten in His Own Ward.

The Vice-President was defeated in his voting district, his city ward and his Assembly district.

On the face of the primary returns already in through the State the Roosevelt progressives to-day claimed that the ex-President's control of the Republican State convention and the consequent defeat of Vice-President Sherman for the temporary chairmanship was assured. Four hundred and fifty-eight Roosevelt delegates have been elected to 493 for Mr. Sherman. The Roosevelt leaders declare that Broome, Chemung, Erie, Rensselaer and Suffolk counties will give Roosevelt fifty-one more delegates, or a total of 509—one more than sufficient to control the convention.

According to the claims of the reactionists, fifty-seven more Sherman delegates will be chosen, while the only doubtfuls to be heard from are the six Rockland County delegates. Seven delegates already elected from Putnam and Wyoming counties were denominated "doubtful" by the Roosevelt followers.

Says Sherman Will Lead.

William Barnes, Jr., leader of the reactionaries, laughs at these estimates of his rivals, however, and confidently asserts that Mr. Sherman will have a handsome majority in the convention. Col. Roosevelt will head a solid delegation from Nassau county—his home—to the convention. The heaviest guns of the progressives were trained upon Oneida county, in which Utica is located, with telling effect, but in spite of his organization's defeat, Mr. Sherman will be a delegate to the convention.

WAITERS BEWAIL TIP STRINGENCY

CHICAGO, Sept. 21.—Chicago waiters have a grouch. They told about it at an "experience" meeting. Rents have gone up and tips have gone down. "I tell you, Mr. Chairman, it costs like the deuce to live," said John Erkman. "Customers are getting niggardly. We don't get enough to live on. Some swell guy comes in with a lady friend or two and eats a $7.50 meal. I get a measly fifteen cents, where I used to get a crisp $2 bill."

WROTE WILL ON DOCTOR'S BLANK

The will of the late Mary H. Thompson of Brookline was written on a prescription blank of Dr. Robert F. Souther of that town. It was allowed by Judge Flint in the Norfolk County Probate Court at Dedham to-day. The will, which disposes of $800 in real estate and $200 in personal property, gives all to the husband of the testatrix and reads as follows:

"I request that all my property will be given to Henry R. Thompson to hold in trust for my daughter Maud, wife of Herman O. Webster of Auburndale, the income to be used by my said husband during his lifetime and to be disposed of by him in accordance with verbal instructions which I have given."

The will is dated August 2 last. Mrs. Thompson died twenty-one days later.

LOOK OUT FOR THE APHIDAE!

"Aph" is in town.

Yes, "Aph" is right—not "Eph."

"Aph" is short for Aphis and Aphis is short, too—about three-eighths of an inch (bug joke).

Speaking zoologically, however, Aphis is of the order Hemiptera and is a species of plant lice. He is a tiny, winged green insect. When enough of him gets in the sunlight, with the sunshine gleaming in his myriad wings, he looks like a young snowstorm.

"Aph"—to speak informally—came to town yesterday. He gets here about every Fall. He is a pest. He sticks to your clothes. He lands in your eye. He buzzes into your ear. He is a fresh insect generally.

Funny thing about "Aph," too. He is the ant's Bossy cow. He sucks the sweet juices from plants and then exudes a substance known as honeydew, of which ants are very fond.

It is a scientific and bugological fact that ants farm out the aphidae (plural), just as a farmer does cows. When the ant wants to milk his herd of aphidae he tickles them at the sides of the body. The aphis gives forth the honeydew from a pair of tubes near the abdomen.

The attention of the Boston milk contractors is respectfully called to this branch of their industry which so far seems to be run without their sanction or control.

FUNERAL SERVICE FOR J. L. AMBROSE

The funeral of John Lee Ambrose was held from the Prospect Hill Congregational Church, Somerville, this afternoon. The Rev. Paul Gordon, pastor of the church, officiated, assisted by Rev. Dr. C. L. Winship, a former pastor. Mr. Ambrose was for forty years connected with the clerk's office at the East Cambridge Courthouse. For fifteen years he was first assistant clerk of the Superior Court. Among the honorary pallbearers were Mayor John M. Woods of Somerville, County Treasurer Joseph O. Hayden, George A. Kimball, Richard Sturtevant and Ralph Smith. The body was placed in a tomb in Mt. Auburn Cemetery.

CARDINALS TO GET $750 FOR PLAYER

CINCINNATI, O., Sept. 21.—The National Commission has directed the Wheeling Central League club to pay at once $750 to the St. Louis Nationals for player Jewell.

St. Louis drafted Jewell from Wheeling in 1909, but returned the player to Wheeling last spring, with the understanding that it should be reimbursed the draft price of $750. Wheeling failed to pay the money and St. Louis appealed to the commission.

18 HURT IN RAIL COLLISION IN FOG

LEXINGTON, Ky., Sept. 21.—Eighteen men were hurt, two fatally, when an engine and a car on the Illinois Central Railroad, carrying a crew to a freight wreck, crashed into the wreckage in a fog to-day.

GILLETT TO SPEAK HERE.

Congressman F. H. Gillett has promised to speak at the mass meeting to be held in Faneuil Hall on October 1 on the bill for old age retirement to be presented at the next session of Congress. HOBBLE SKIRT COMES FROM THE JAPANESE, BARONESS DECLARES

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—"There is much that the women of Japan can learn from the American woman, but one thing much agitated in European countries that doesn't in the least interest the women of our country is the woman suffrage question."

It was the Baroness Mitsui, wife of the Rockefeller of Japan, speaking on American women and customs in her apartments in the Plaza Hotel.

"I cannot help but feel that they will not improve themselves by spending so much time and thought upon the outside political problems which belong to man not only by tradition but by centuries of training and by physical strength as well," she continued. "No woman has the strength to attend to all the demands of the home—those of wife and mother and supervisor of the domestic regime—and still be able to cope with the issues of politics and finance. It is impossible. Something is bound to be neglected.

Baroness Mitsui of Japan.

Effect on Home.

"It isn't that the mere casting of a vote will take time, nor would it make a woman less feminine, but if she is to do the work of a politician, if she is to take upon herself the responsibilities of being a voter, she must spend time in preparation for such matters. Instead of devoting her mental energies to learning all she can that will enhance her usefulness as a mother and as her husband's companion and her daughter's counsellor, she will have to devote the time she should take for such things to talking and learning of political conditions.

"In the first place, it would revolutionize the accepted customs of our country if she did; for at present—and I sincerely hope that it will continue so—our men and women meet only in a social way and not to talk politics and such questions. Our women are brought up in a more exclusive way than foreign women, and have no desire for the things that do not affect the home and family life. Abstract politics certainly has no relation to the natural usefulness of women.

"It really seems to me that the American women have too much charm and intelligence to run the risk of losing it through an aggressive fight for the ballot."

Hobble Skirt's Origin.

"And how do you like the 'hobble skirts?'"

"Oh, they are no novelty to me. In fact, the so-called hobble skirt doesn't in the least shock the eyes of Japanese women, for they really appear to be an adaptation of our own native dress. You see, the kimona is wrapped rather tightly about the figure below the knees, just where the hobble skirt is held in by straps.

"I would suggest, however, that your women learn to walk Japanese fashion, with their hobble skirts. You know the Japanese women have a distinctive little step that has come to them from wearing kimonos. If foreign women wear the present style of dress for a few generations they will find that their walk has changed into a little hop or quick step, for it is impossible to take the ordinary step where the ankles are so confined."

Another feature of American life that doesn't meet with the approval of the Baroness is the freedom which American girls have in making their own marriages.

Mothers Make Marriages.

"In Japan, the mother always make the marriages," the Baroness said. "They choose their prospective sons-in-law, and nearly always they find the matches ideally happy. In America your young girls are allowed to choose their husbands, and I have wondered if the enormous percentage of divorces is the outcome of that condition. In Japan, the girls are subservient, in such matters, to their parents. They have been taught to believe that their parents are the best judges of such things.

"A mother, with her broader experience, coolly weighs all sides of the question. She chooses a man who she knows will make a good husband for the girl. Of course, too, we never allow our girls to mix socially with young boys as the young college students and others do here."

On the other hand, Baroness Mitsui is tremendously taken with the outward charm of American women.

"I have never seen such beautiful figures or better taste displayed in dress than I have seen here," she said. "They all have superb complexions and look so good-natured and happy."

The Baroness and party will remain here a few days longer at the Plaza and then leave for Washington, Chicago and other Western cities. They will leave San Francisco in a month's time for Tokio.

MARIE PEREZ'S ROMANCE TRICK TO ENTER U. S.

The romance which was supposed to surround Miss Marie Perez, the winsome French girl from Algeria, who arrived at this port last Monday on the Winifredian for the purpose, as she said, of marrying Antonio Vidal of New York, came to a sordid ending to-day when the girl admitted that she had come across the ocean to New York only last month and had been turned back at that port and deported because it was suspected Vidal brought her here for immoral purposes.

The Boston immigration authorities received their first clue as to the facts when they started to look up Vidal in New York. They found that he was still detained at Ellis Island by the immigration officers on the charge of attempting to bring the girl into the country. When Miss Perez was confronted with this circumstances to-day she confessed that she was the same girl as had figured in the New York case and that she had merely tried to re-enter the country at Boston when she failed in New York.

The girl will be deported from Boston. The evidence obtained from her here will be used to secure Vidal's deportation from New York.

Connected with the case, too, is a story of a Boston society matron who was so interested in the supposed misfortunes of the poor girl at this port that she wished she had brought her into this port as governess for her own children.

When the Winifredian docked last Monday from Liverpool Immigration Inspector Weiss questioned this Miss Marie Perez, as she was registered on the passenger list. She was an extremely pretty and cultuerd young woman, born in Algiers of French descent. She came first class and had over $400. She said she was to be a governess. Weiss's surpicions were aroused, however.

Then the girl, with consummate art, feigned to break down and to confess that she was really coming here to wed Antonio Vidal of New York, only she was too modest to talk of her love affairs to an immigration official.

Marie admitted the whole story to-day and is ready to go back to Liverpool. The local authorities say that the facts will now end in Vidal being shipped out of the country, too.

Later to-day the Perez girl told the Boston immigration officials that Vidal had embezzled $7,000 from Lisbon. This statement was forwarded to New York and may cause Vidal to be deported to Portugal for the Lisbon authorities.

FAIRBANKS BIG SUCCESS IN "THE CUB"

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

The delayed opening of "The Cub" passed off so brightly at the Globe Theatre last evening that William A. Brady captured the midnight train for New York with a clear conscience and a mind free from worry, and Douglas Fairbanks, who has often cheered us in weary moments, found himself serenely bumping elbows with another positive hit.

It was a happy idea that inspired Thompson Buchanan to write humorously of the bloodthirsty mountaineers of Kentucky, who have long furnished amusement to readers of Eastern newspapers. Family feuds in which the quarrelling factions use their neighbors for target practice are interesting only when viewed with a well defined sense of humor, and that is what Mr. Buchanan's play encouraged you to do. Mr. Fairbanks, as a cub reporter from Louisville, did the rest.

It was really quite a task that Mr. Buchanan set for himself in holding the Kentucky highland citizens t ridicule, and you cannot help but feel that without Mr. Fairbanks' assistance he might have fared badly. At any rate, you laughed yourself into near collapse at this farcical melodrama, much to the artistic profit of Mr. Fairbanks, who never for a moment lost sight of the fact that he was constantly in troubled waters. But his active sense of humor and his skill in projecting it to every corner of the audience put everyone on the pay-as-you-enter side of the footlights in good spirits.

Very Satirical View.

"Th Cub" took on an extremely satirical view of a particular feud, the origin of which was traced to a dispute over two small pigs. The list of dead and wounded was long and honorable, and the affair had reached the second generation when the play opened. Steve Oldham, a cub reporter, was the Courier-Journal's war correspondent at the front because all of the seasoned reporters were engaged in more important work. Steve's ambition to furnish live news from the seat of war and his infatuation for Alice Bentley, a fair member of one of the factions, kept him in alternate high and low temperature, with many indications that his departure from activity would not only be sudden but complete. It was hardly a tribute to his cash value that the fued was finally settled on the payment of $1.50, of which $1.37 was to be real money, with his body to be delivered to his enemies in lieu of the thirteen-ent balane. A judgmnt of the trade was forgotten in the rippling comedy it provided.

Succession of Laughs.

None of the early season plays has sparkled more joyously than "The Cub," for it was one long succession of laughs—laughs that caught you unexpectedly and kept you squirming in your seat.

Mr. Fairbanks's success could not have been more emphatic. His boyish humor had no sinking spells—it was fairly throbbing with good nature, and he held his audience in the palm of his hand until the final curtain, which, by the way, indulged in a few pranks last night, to the manifest embarrassment of the players.

The serious side of the play was in safe hands, with James A. Marcus, Ernest Baxter, Charles Macdonald, Joseph Green and Millicent Evans figuring most conspicuously.

"The Cub" would melt the most pronounced case of melancholia.

THOMAS A. HILLS OF SOUTH BOSTON DEAD

South Boston's grand old man, Thomas A. Hills, is dead at his home, No. 343 K street, at the age of eighty-three. He is survived by a widow, his second wife, and a married son. Mr. Hills was in the House of Representatives from 1861 to 1865. The latter year he was elected an Assessor. He later became Chief Assessor. In 1876 Mr. Hils was elected a director of the South Boston Savings Bank, becoming president of that institution in 1884. He was a member of the Barnard Memorial Chapel Association and a number of fraternal orders.

TWO CHEMISES MAKE MILADI REALLY CHIC

CHICAGO, Sept. 21.—"The fashionably dressed woman hereafter must wear two chemises—one underneath and one on top. This is the latest dictum of those who make clothes for women," said Miss Mullen of New York and Paris, authority on fashion, who is preparing to lay the matter before the banquet of the dressmakers' convention next Friday night.

"Officially," the new idea is characterized as the "Greek Chiton," but a Parisian "artist" explained that this appellation was used for the purpose of making it go down easily, much as a brandied peach once helped a dose of quinine. The thing is really an outside chemise and has been invented to help out the top end of a contraption just as new, which is known in the dressmaking shop as the "bolster slip" gown.

One of the star demonstrators at the convention this year is Mrs. Middleton, who has spent sixteen years studying how fashions are created in Paris.

"The outside chemises fasten on the left shoulder," she said. "They are a part of the dress, not a cloak or wrap of any sort. They will be worn next year."

The "bolster slip" gown, which is coming along soon, say the modists, is the definite outcome of the hobble skirt. Among real dressmakers, it seems, the hobble skirt never was taken seriously in itself, but "created a tendency," and the "bolster slip" is the result.

To make a "bolster slip" gown use material with Oriental colors and follow the general lines of a stove pipe.

One should never sit down in a "bolster slip" gown. There would be a noise like something ripping, and it would have to be sewed again.

The "outside chemise" is to be hung over the "bolster slip" gown.

BENNINGTON, Vt., Sept. 21.—With shotguns and revolvers aimed at the building containing the First National Bank at North Bennington, an excited posse of officers and citizens spent some time awaiting the appearance of burglars who were supposed to be inside. It was then found that the marauders had fled and that the bank's funds were intact.

Missed Rat, but Hit Pies.

NEW ROCHELLE, Sept. 21.—Frank Sturino and Isaac Silver, who have a stable at No. 50 Second street, were arrested for shooting off firearms. Silver saw a rat coming out of the stable with a chicken. Counterfeits.

Read what one of the GREATEST NEWSPAPERS IN AMERICA has to say on this subject:

"The manufacturers of Castoria have been compelled to spend hundreds of thousands of dollars to familiarize the public with the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. This has been necessitated by reason of pirates counterfeiting the Castoria trade-mark. This counterfeiting is a crime not only against the proprietors of Castoria, but against the growing generation. All persons should be careful to see that Castoria bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher, if they would guard the health of their children. Parents, and mothers in particular, ought to carefully examine the Castoria advertisements which have been appearing in this paper, and to remember that the wrapper of every bottle of genuine Castoria bears the fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher, under whose supervision it has been manufactured continuously for over thirty years.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Exact Copy of Wrapper.

Letters from Prominent Druggists addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Conger Bros. of St. Paul, Minn., say: "Fletcher's Castoria is certainly full of merit and worthy of recommendation."

C. G. A. Loder, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "For 20 years we have sold Fletcher's Castoria and are pleased to state that it has given universal satisfaction."

The Scholtz Drug Co., of Denver, Colo., says: "Fletcher's Castoria has surely become a household word. Seemingly every family where there are children uses it."

Hoagland & Mansfield, of Boston, Mass., say: "We have nothing but good to say about your Castoria and we do not hesitate to give it our unqualified endorsement."

Riker's Drug Stores, of New York City, say: "Fletcher's Castoria is one of the oldest and most popular preparations in our stores. We have nothing but good to say about it."

Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., of St. Louis, Mo., says: "Of the thousands of patent medicines for which we have demand there are a very few of them that we can conscientiously recommend and your Castoria is included in this few."

D. R. Dyche & Co., of Chicago, Ills., say: "The increasing demand for your Castoria shows that a discriminating public is not slow to seek out a remedy of merit and one convinced that it does all and even more than claimed they do not hesitate to recommend it to their friends."

The Owl Drug Co., of San Francisco, Cal., says: "We have always been a believer in the 'original man protection' and have been particular never to sell anything but the genuine and original Castoria (Fletcher's). We have many calls every day for this article from people who say they would not be without it in their homes."

RUSSIA HALTS EXTRADITION OF WEZOSOL

over a hundred Boston friends who have Mrs. John Knudsin of Squantum and worked to save the life and liberty of Andrew Rullow, alias Julius Wenzol, are congratulating him upon the abandonment by the Russian government of its attempt to secure his extradition on a charge of robbery.

Following a mass meeting called by Mrs. Knudson and many prominent Boston sympathizers to protest against the action of Russia, Russian Consul Joseph A. Conry has been instructed by the imperial government to take "other action," which is interpreted by the counsel and friends of the accused man to mean that criminal charges against Wenzol will not be prosecuted.

A cable dispatch received from St. Petersburg announced that the Russian foreign office, after a conference with the minister of justice, had decided to waive the claim for extradition, and that the Russian consul at Boston had been instructed to bring action for the recovery of fourteen notes for $250 each which are said to be in the possession of Rullow or to have been negotiated by him. The bulk of the 200 notes stolen in 1907 are said to be in America.

Andrew Rullow was arrested August 13 by United States secret service officers on complaint of the Russian Imperial Government, as a fugitive from justice, charged with the larceny of 250,000. The crime with which it was alleged he was connected was the attack upon and looting of a wagon containing 300,000 roubles in Government notes in the streets of Tiflis in September, 1907. The wagon was carrying the money from the Tiflis sub-treasury to the postoffice when the Cossack guard was dispersed by the explosion of a bomb. Three Cossacks were killed, as were the horses attached to the wagon. In the panic following the explosion, the wagon was looted. The crime was charged to a group of social revolutionaries whom the imperial government has since sought.

The accused man holds a degree of Ph. D. from the University of Zurich and speaks Russian, Lettish, Yiddish, German and Italian. He made his home with Mrs. John Knudsin, No. 42 Pratt road, Squantum.

CAN RAISE MAINE BY 4 MONTHS' WORK

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—"The hulk of the battleship Maine, now resting on the bottom of Havana Harbor, can be raised with no great amount of difficulty and within four months after work is begun."

This statement was made to-day by John F. O'Rourke, the contractor who returned from Havana a few days ago after making observations of the Maine, taking soundings and making measurements. Plans have already been started by the contractors toward the raising and floating of the ship, and the recovery of the 250 dead who were carried down when the battleship sank.

O'Rourke will visit President Taft the early part of next week.

RED HOT IRON BAR WIELDER IS HELD

Edward M. Kehoe, the man charged with assaulting Charles Bacon with a red hot iron bar at the plant of the Walworth Manufacturing Company, South Boston, was to-day held in $500 for the Grand Jury in the South Boston court. Then Kehoe is said to have struck Bacon on the head. The latter was in court with his head in bandages.

BOSTON PAINTERS SEEK SEPARATION

The four Boston locals of the Painters' District Council to-day forwarded to international headquarters a petition seeking to be separated from the old district council and asking that they be permitted to organize a council of their own. The Boston union claimed that the council covered an wide a territory that too little attention was given to Boston.

TO SHOW MOTOR VEHICLES BEST FOR BUSINESS

By J. C. KERRISON.

The fact that motor vehicles can be operated in connection with business more advantageously and more economically than can horse-drawn vehicles will be substantially demonstrated during the motor truck run of the BOSTON AMERICAN, next month. This run should do more towards creating a more general and widespread interest in motor trucks than any previous feature in the local motor world. There is no good reason why Boston and New England should be backward in this branch of the industry. There is a decided demand for rapid delivery of commodities, and no other means can excel the motor vehicle, either in economy of operation, reliability of vehicle, or greater dispatch.

Many of the Boston houses have adopted this modern method of distributing their merchandise, and so advantageous has the use of commercial vehicles proven that Postmaster General Frank H. Hitchcock has recommended that when the next contract for mail delivery in Chicago is let, that motor trucks be given the work instead of horse-drawn wagons. It would seem that it would be wise for merchants to utilize the same method of transportation as that adopted by the Government.

The cost of maintenance of motor trucks is said to be materially less than that of horse-drawn vehicles, and that they accomplish greater work in less time is emphatically demonstrated not alone in governmental positions, but likewise in many of the Boston business houses.

It is a noticeable fact that the great bulk of the delivery of some of the largest furniture houses of this city is done by motor truck, while several of the dry-goods houses have likewise adopted the motor vehicle as part and parcel of their delivery system. The utilization of the motor vehicle by several of the local expresses is another straw showing which way the wind blows.

It needs only such a contest as that planned by the BOSTON AMERICAN, where comparisons or records are established in open competition, to settle beyond all question the relative merits and cost of operation of the motor and horse-drawn vehicles.

Although the contest is a month away, the interest in the same is decidedly keen, scarcely a day going by but what some one or more firms, or individuals, seek for information or enter cars for the contest. Yesterday, word was received from Sale Manager W. A. Schwartz of the Mets Company of Waltham, who says, "We will go into the BOSTON AMERICAN Commercial Vehicle Reliability Run with two or three of our Mets special delivery package cars, which we are just preparing for the market. Mail us a few more entry blanks. We have a few of our customers who likewise desire to enter the Private Owners' class."

Realizing that the New England territory was of sufficient importance to require the establishment of a branch house in this section, the Velie Motor Company has established its New England headquarters at No. 92 Massachusetts avenue, Morton H. Luce, who for years has been connected with the house service, has done some excellent work in Chicago, has been placed in charge of the New England territory. Mr. Luce comes highly recommended, bringing with him a reputation for managerial ability. In speaking of the plans of his company yesterday, Mr. Luce said, "The Velie Company feels that its interests in New England are so great as to be worthy of a direct representation. To do it may do business direct with its customers and not with a thirty, forty Velie policy has always been to get in close touch with its trade, and in no way can this be accomplished any more thoroughly than by the creation of such establishments. A person who does business with the Boston branch is virtually doing it direct with the home office, and in this rule the customer feels that his interests are better safe-guarded by a factory representative, than by an agent. The Boston branch has been established with that idea in mind, and is but another link in the strong Velie chain that extends throughout the United States."

OFFICER DESCRIBES FIRST ENCAMPMENT OF THE BOY SCOUTS

By LIEUT. JAMES J. INGOLDSBY. OF SALEM, MASS.

I recently had the pleasure of commanding the first attempt by the American Boy Scout to go into a practical military camp, at Weymouth Heights. The Scouts, at the outset, remembering the extraordinary privilege so graciously granted to them by the President and Commander-in-Chief of all the armies of the United States in receiving them at Beverly, returned the compliment by naming their camp "Camp William Howard Taft."

When I went to camp I did not intend to stay longer than perhaps one evening. After the first ten hours of camp life, and when I saw the marvelous facilities of these forming minds for camp work, I was very glad to accept the invitation of the Secretary for the Department of New England to remain in camp through the week.

The principles of the American Boy Scout are those which should call for and receive the most enthusiastic support of all patriotic citizens. These principles inculcate in the mind of the growing boy invaluable lessons of honor and justice to his fellows and the most loyal devotion to his country.

Daily Reminder of Duty.

The American Boy Scouts' Oath is a daily reminder of his duty and the Scout Law, if every boy were taught and compelled to live up to it, will make a true, loyal friend and citizen of him.

At the age of admission to this remarkable organization, between ten and eighteen years in the Department of New England, the boys are in the most important period of their lives. If ever a boy needs discipline he needs it then. These are the golden years, when characters are moulded and careers begin. Then is the time as President Taft so eloquently told the Scouts at Beverly, when "The boy is father to the man."

As the prophets of old gave their wonderful messages to men, and hastened the evolution of the races of antiquity, so must Ernest Thompson-Seton have likewise been inspired when he delivered his messages on the value of Scout Craft, Woodcraft, Seacraft, Camp in the Woods and Open, the Winter Sports, as a potent form for the development of boy character and manhood.

Max Nordau has pointed out that men are formed by three things, heredity, education and environment. What a sweet, wholesome, corrective agency for any defect in heredity or the ordinary environment of so many of our boys, is a few days, a week, perhaps a month in the sweet, clean, wide outdoors.

Great Lesson of Nature.

Life in the open teaches a boy the works of the Omnipotent Father. A skillful teacher can make such a boy realize as never before these things as it were impossible to instruct them within the confines of four walls. It teaches them to be self-reliant, disciplined, courageous, respectful to authority and their elders, honesty, truthfulness, thrift and loyalty.

The scouting hikes and camping tours train them to observe nature, all their surrounding conditions, how man has modified the natural topography. It teaches them observance and after a week in camp I had boys who could make a quick, accurate description of the country, and several of them were able to map and sketch every road and peculiar feature.

Camping taught them how to pitch and strike their tents, and if no tentage was available, how to make a shelter to protect them from the wind or rain.

Camping taught them to cook their own meals, how to make their own bed, how to build fires with not over two matches. Camping taught them cleanliness of person in order to protect their own health and not to endanger the health of their fellows.

Forming the Patrols.

In Camp William Howard Taft at Weymouth, for five days, we had three patrols of thirty-three boys. These patrols were not formed in the usual way, a certain group of boys in a certain neighborhood, or perhaps boys of a certain nationality or religion. We had just a group fortuitously assembled. We had representatives there of the ancient Hebrew people, Roman Catholics, Baptists, Congregationalists, Unitarian, Universalists, and several boys who might be said to belong to that great "big church," which includes so many lads whose fathers and mothers have grown indifferent to existing religion.

To such boys the appeal of the American Boy Scout and his ideals, comes as a saving grace, not that there is any attempt made to substitute the American Boy Scout ideals for the boy's national religious training.

When the call for mess was sounded, the boys were quickly formed into line, each with his own kit, consisting of a plate, a dipper, a fork, a knife and a spoon. The boys marched eagerly but always in an orderly way to the kitchen, where camp master Joel Sargent served a clean, savory, steaming palatable meal. Every boy was permitted to return for as much more food as he wanted, or as we say, "for seconds." Each boy was then made to wash his own mess-kit and put it back in his haversack.

The Daily Routine.

Our daily routine was something like this:

Reveille at 6 a. m.; assembly at 6:15 a. m.; mess 7 a. m.; fatigue, 7:45 a. m.; inspection, 8:10 a. m.; instructions in scouting games, 8:30 to 11:45 a. m.; dinner at 12, noon; instructions and scouting games from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m.; retreat 5 p. m.; dinner, 5:30 p. m.; call to quarters, 8:45 p. m.; taps, 9 p. m.

When taps was sounded on the first day, it seemed that none of the Scouts could sleep after their day of excitement. They were roused early, however, and when they were told that sleep was a necessity, and given plenty of work, policing the camp, attending to the sanitary needs they were ready for their beds when taps were sounded at 9 o'clock on the second night.

After one or two inspections every boy had learned to keep his property clean and in place and to be careful about his personal appearance.

Our instruction in scouting games was given over to swimming, teaching the art to those who did not know how to keep afloat, road work, how to handle boats, patrol work, scouting, signalling, map work.

The ceremony of retreat was held each day and instruction in the history and symbolism for the United States flag and respect for it, was given.

Around the Camp Fire.

In the evening I assembled the Scouts around a blazing campfire and we discussed the American Boy Scout and Law and its meaning. A review of the days was also made.

That the life in camp was acceptable and gave pleasure to the Scout was proven by the fact that very few went home—not more than five. These had excellent reasons, such as not having paid their way for longer than two or three days, and scorning the offer to le them stay the entire week, as the guests of the American Boy Scout movement.

These boys were, of course, approached delicately on this subject, but refused to become "dead heads" ... they knew that the other boys, mo... ortunate financially, had paid their w... for the entire week. It is just possible that one or two of the boys had an acute attack of nostalgia, which most people call "homesickness." In fact two little fellows, who returned home to see their mothers, as promptly reported back at camp the next day, finding that Boston had not met with any calamity, that their family roof trees were still intact, that their parents were getting on quite successfully with the daily routine without their supposed indispensable presence as cogs in the family machine.

We broke camp on Saturday evening with much regret. We had had a week of work and fun.

Boy Scouts Aid to Country.

From a military viewpoint, a well trained Boy Scout would prove to be an invaluable asset to his country in case of need. Think what a splendid thing it would be if we had a million American Boy Scouts, trained in the essential features of field work. The task of giving them such instruction in time of national peril would be trivial, compared to the tremendous labor of handling the raw recruit, such as we do now.

I am satisfied, as a military man, who served in the regular army and in the Spanish War, that had William Randolph Hearst started the American Boy Scout movement in the early nineties, thousands of young men, who now sleep forever, because of our ignorance of even the rudiments of war, would to-day be alive and well.

It does not at all follow, that because a boy goes into this American Boy Scout movement that he must, of necessity become a sort of bloodthirsty mercenary, who goes raging up and down the land with a chip on his shoulder, picking a quarrel with his neighbor, and urging the nation itself to live by the sword.

These principles of the American Boy Scout are clean and upright and they teach him that his word must be his honor that he owes a duty to God and to his country. His friendship is unquestioned, his loyalty is unfailing.

I summarize it in a word: The American Boy Scout is "Father to the Man," but he will also prove parent to the highest type of American citizen that we have yet produced.

For full information about how to become an American Boy Scout write to the Secretary, The American Boy Scout, Department of New England, No. 5 Bromfield street, Boston, Mass.

WRIGHTS FLY AT ROCHESTER FAIR

ROCHESTER, N. H., Sept. 21.—Flights by the Wright brtohers in their wonderful biplane and real horse racing are to be the two big features at the Rochester Fair, held September 27 to 30, inclusive. The Wright biplane will be seen in the air every day of the fair. Each time that it ascends it will carry a passenger besides the operator. A large sum of money has been paid to secure the Wright brothers for this year's fair. The exact sum has not been made public, but it is known that they never accept an engagement for less than $10,000.

Big purses are offered in the horse races and keen contests are promised. An automobile show, a fireman's muster and all the other attractions that go with this great fair will be features this year. The Boston & Maine railroad has agreed to offer special rates to Rochester during the progress of the fair.

PROFESSOR MOORE COMING TO BOSTON

Professor J. Howard Moore, a Chicago writer and humanitarian, will deliver addresses on Saturday and Sunday, October 1 and 2, under the auspices of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, in the reception rooms of Mrs. Sharpe, who has opened her home at No. 74 Commonwealth avenue, Newton Boulevard, for that purpose. Professor Moore is identified with Chicago public schools and it is hoped that a large number of teachers in this vicinity will be present at the Saturday meeting. All interested in humane work are invited to attend the one to be held on Sunday. President Rowley will preside and speak at both.

SEPTEMBER 27—Caucuses of all parties in cities and towns which have adopted the joint caucus act. Caucuses of all parties in Suffolk County. Democratic caucuses in all cities and towns.

SEPTEMBER 28—Republican caucuses in cities and towns outside Suffolk County which have not adopted the joint caucus act.

OCTOBER 6—Democratic convention in Faneuil Hall. Republican convention in Tremont Temple.

OCTOBER 19—Registration for State election ends at 10 p. m.

NOVEMBER 8—State election.

TO-DAY, and every day, before 3 p. m.—Leave a note at the BOSTON AMERICAN office, addressed to "Political Editor," telling where your rallies are to be held the following day.

* * *

Six days to the primaries.

* * *

"Doc" Coughlin of Fall River in town. 'Sh! Not a word!

* * *

* * *

The Mayor of Boston believes that the name of the Democratic nominee for Governor will begin with "F." He has been with Foss.

* * *

Walter A. Webster's endorsement of Candidate Cotton will help the latter. It may not help Walter with the men who think they own the Republican party, but Walter isn't worth worrying about that.

* * *

Three open-air rallies and one indoors for Congressman O'Connell to-night. Open-air at Mercer and Ninth streets and at Andrews square, South Boston; also at Everett square, Dorchester. Indoors at Ward 20 wardroom, Meeting House Hill.

* * *

Live in Winthrop? Congressman Kellher speaks there to-night in the Pastime Theatre. Live in East Boston? Kellher speaks there to-night in Stirks-Boulevard Hall on Saratoga street. Live in some other part of the Ninth district? Kellher will be around your way later.

* * *

Candidate Curley is a pretty good stage manager. But that stunt where the man called for a speech from "the convict candidate," then got into an argument with Mr. Curley, and finally said he was sorry for what he had done and promised to vote for the Ward 17 man, was too raw. The plant shouldn't have remained on the furniture wagon, calling the Curley lieutenants by their first names and borrowing cigarettes from them. Furthermore, the janitor of the Tammany Club shouldn't be used for the plant.

* * *

Harry Frothingham of Ward 11 is back in town, with a tan that would make a sea captain envious. He dropped in to Democratic State headquarters for a chat with Chairman Macleod.

* * *

Jimmie Powers has been laid up with a severe cold. Pneumonia was feared. All right now, and his rallies for the Democratic nomination for Senator in the South Boston district will be resumed to-night. Jimmie doesn't believe in making the "L" carry passengers for nothing, but his constituents don't care so much about that, so long as South Boston applicants are not discriminated against in the appointment of motormen and conductors.

* * *

The early bird catches the worm. But the early applicant isn't certain of capturing the local ward-room for rallies on desirable nights unless he is in favor with who's who. Former Representative Joe Leonard applied for the Old Franklin Schoolhouse for to-night about two months ago. He paid his two bones, and advertised the taking of the wardroom on July 22nd.

* * *

Representative Tim Callahan applied for the wardroom a short time ago. He advertised the application last Friday. Tim wins. A rally for his ward committee ticket and convention delegations will be held to-night. Daniel L. Connolly, candidate for a House nomination, will be one of the chief speakers. Former Alderman Dave Barry will do the "We-have-with-us-this-evening" stunt. To-night's performance will be repeated next Monday night.

* * *

The folks at Democratic State headquarters don't object to Henry Lavers coming in and impressing his arguments by pounding ink bottles and mucilage bottles on the desk. But, really, isn't it going too far when one emphasizes a point by kicking a hole in the cuspidor beside the committee chairman's desk.

* * *

Chairman Hatfield and Executive Secretary Groves address a gathering of Republican committeemen of Franklin and Hampshire counties at Greenfield to-morrow. Friday they speak at Young's Hotel before a gathering of committeemen from Norfolk County.

* * *

Big doings for the Democrats at the American House in Lowell to-night. Fred Macleod, John McDonald and Tom Riley are the orators. The Democratic committeemen of Lowell and thereabouts are the audience. The same orators speak at Lawrence on Friday night. Saturday they go to M. C. Pettingill's outing of Essex County Democrats at the Danvers Country Club. It is planned to form an Essex Country Democratic Club at this last meeting.

* * *

Former Representative Fred Deitrick is not going to let Chairman Macleod of the State Committee carry off the Democratic nomination in the Eighth Congressional District without a fight. He is in to the finish, he says

* * *

Robert P. Clarkson, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Senator in the Dorchester-Roxbury District, is speaking at the rallies of all candidates for other offices. The machine leaders of the district are against him and with Martin P. F. Curley.

* * *

The men behind Scott Peters in his campaign for the Senatorial nomination against Arthur L. Nason in the Fourth Essex district have advised him to announce that he wants but one term and that he would work to give the nomination to the towns in the district next year. But Scott doesn't see it that way,—yet.

* * *

Former Senator George Monahan promises to give two years' salary to charity, provided he's elected to Congress from the Ninth District. George always was original.

* * *

Chairman Macleod says that his interview with Mayor Fitzgerald was sought by himself. As to their conversation,—Fine day, isn't it?

* * *

General Charles W. Bartlett, just back from Europe, says: "I like James H. Vahey and would like to see him Governor, but I regard Eugene N. Foss as the strongest candidate. He has money and nerve and is popular."

* * *

The Watertown delegates to the Democratic State convention say they will vote for Vahey. Did they really believe that people thought otherwise.

* * *

Candidate McNary predicts Cannon's defeat. That's an easy one. Give us a prediction on the outcome of the Tenth Congressional scrap.

* * *

Candidate Giblin says he will hold one hundred rallies—more or less—next Saturday. Careful, Thomas. Folks may suspect that you are the Fitz candidate.

* * *

Ever hear Joseph McManus, president of the Bookbinders' Union, speak? He is a candidate for a Democratic nomination for the House of Representatives in Ward 19. You can hear him to-night at Heath square at 8 o'clock, and at Heath and Day streets at 9 o'clock. Joseph Prout will do the introducing.

HERE'S CHANCE FOR BRIDES

Engaged couples, young married couples or anyone else, for that matter, who is concerned with the house furnishing question, will be keenly interested in a suite of eight rooms, all furnished and decorated, which is to be shown to the public the latter part of this week. This sample suite is on the fifth floor of the Jordan Marsh Company. Estimates for the reproduction of any or all of the suite of rooms can be obtained in an office adjacent to the suite.

Entering the hallway the visitor gets a general effect of a rich brown oak in the baronial style. Reproductions of the Lechmere caning have been used in the seats and backs and the hangings and upholstery are Kingcord with heraldic device; the reception room is a reproduction of the Louis XVI. style. The dining room is of the English colonial variety in blue and mahogany and the comfort and cosiness of the den adds to the luxurious features. The family chamber is also in Louis XVI., the casement windows and the soft hangings materialize a very cosy and refined effect. The other rooms are also fitted in attractive atmosphere.

BOSTON TYPIST TO FIGHT WILL

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—Mrs. Mabell Thompson, widow of Robert H. Thompson, millionaire paper manufacturer, to-day declared she is prepared to put up a stubborn legal battle for her share of her husband's estate when the hearing on his will opens to-morrow in the Surrogate's Court.

Mrs. Thompson was formerly the stenographer of Thompson, and was married to him in Boston. She believes that a will favoring her was in existence at one time and now wants to know what has become of it.

A document said to be the will of Mr. Thompson is alleged to have been found in a tin box belonging to him shortly after he died in his home in Brooklyn in the latter part of June. Robert H. Thompson, 3d, admits he took the box from his father's house and opened it at the home of his brother, J. Linton Thompson.

After the death of Mr. Thompson a will was produced by which he bequeathed all his personal property to his two sons and a daughter, Mrs. Marian Fook. No mention was made in the document of Mrs. Thompson.

TORPEDO FLEET 'REPULSED' BY BATTLESHIPS

PORTSMOUTH, Va., Sept. 21.—Swinging at anchor, the sixteen battleships of the Atlantic fleet are resting after having repulsed an "attack" by a "torpedo fleet." The torpedo boats crept up on the battleships under conditions that were almost identical with what a real enemy probably would have selected for an attack.

The move was made at night. There was a misty rain that obscured objects at any distance. Through this haze crept the auxiliaries, rowing the targets representing the attacking fleet of torpedo boats. They steamed at an unknown range, from directions to the officers and men of the defending fleet a mystery. When they would come, whence they would come, were questions the sharp eyes of the defenders were expected to determine.

Searchlights in Action.

Steaming in division formation the battleships swept along through the rain and mist. Suddenly their searchlights broke out and swept the ocean from deck to horizon. First on the port, then on the starboard side, the great beams of dazzling white light swung out over the sea, searching for the torpedo boats trying to slip up under cover of the mist and rain to get within range. If one of them got within range the particular battleship at which it aimed would have been out of the battle—officially declared sunk to the bottom of the Atlantic.

But none of them got the range. This way and that the searchlights swung, illumining the sea for miles. Every now and then the great beams of light picked up an auxiliary steaming along with the canvas target towing behind it. Instantly a rain of shells would fall on that target and the particular torpedo boat making that attack was officially sent to Davy Jones.

"Tracer" On Shells.

The course of the shells was easily followed. Each projectile fired had a "tracer" attached, an arrangement of burning wet powder which sent forth a continuous light and trail of smoke as the missile left the gun. The heavens seemed aflame as the projectiles described great parabolas and landed on the targets with a mighty burst of flame and a roar that could be heard for miles.

While both officers and men were wearied with the wait occasioned by the unfavorable weather, the real battle practice and the complete success in repelling the attack of the "enemy" have put them all in splendid humor. The battle practice will be concluded Friday, when the fleet will steam for New York, arriving there in time to give the men shore leave Sunday.

HOOKWORM VICTIM IS RECOVERING

Cesare Gomes, a Portuguese sailor, the only Boston victim of the dread hookworm disease, is recovering at the Carney Hospital. Dr. Thomas F. Leen of the visiting staff of the hospital, who has the case of Gomes under his care, says that there is no occasion for fear of a hookworm epidemic in this vicinity. It can gain ground only, where the soil becomes filled with the hookworms. These, in the larval stage, bore through the skin of persons into the circulation, get to the lungs and finally into the intestines where they feed upon the blood of the victim.

ARTIST CHRISTY AND HIS WIFE REUNITED BY THEIR DAUGHTER

ZANESVILLE, Ohio, Sept. 21.—It is rumored that there has been a reconciliation between Mr. and Mrs. Howard Chandler Christy.

Mrs. Christy arrived in Zanesville and went to her husband's country home in a motor car. In the afternoon neighbors caught sight of her playing tennis with Mr. Christy and their eleven-year-old daughter, Natalie. It was the first family gathering since the sensational proceedings last Winter, when Natalie was awarded to the father after the mother had attempted to prove that he was "not a fit person" to care for her.

To-night over the telephone Mr. Christy laughingly refused to comment upon the rumors of reconciliation. Friends of the family say that Mr. Christy recently made a trip to New York and that he intimated that peace might be restored for the sake of the little girl.

Since the trial Mrs. Christy has been employed on the staff of a New York newspaper, and Christy has been hard at work in his beautiful studio. Natalie has been living with him and his parents, seldom leaving the homestead.

Loses Fight for Child.

Last January Mrs. Howard Chandler Christy failed in her effort to obtain legal custody of Natalie Christy. She brought habeas corpus proceedings before Judge H. C. Smith of the Probate Court, sitting here. The hearing began January 15. On January 28 Judge Smith committed the child to the care of her paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Christy of Duncan Falls, near here. After the hearing the girl went to Duncan Falls. Christy had become living there, too. It was decided by the court that the mother could see the child, subject to the mother's good behavior, at reasonable times. As the father was there, this was equivalent to giving him custody of the child, as far as the mother was concerned.

The hearing on the mother's habeas corpus proceedings developed sensational testimony on each side. Mrs. Christy alleged that her husband was not a fit person to have custody of the child. The mother's lawyer extracted from her witnesses testimony to the effect that prior to his leaving New York his life there was marked by excessive drinking, by abuse of his wife and by improper conduct with his female models.

The mother's witnesses testified, also, that Mrs. Christy reared her daughter carefully, often excusing herself from dinner parties to go to Natalie's room to guide the child in nightly prayer.

Mrs. Christy's sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Hall, were among her witnesses. Hall related incidents of Christy's relations with art models. An effort was made to bring out through Hall alleged improper conduct on the part of Mrs. Christy and a chauffeur known as Edgar Purdy. Judge Smith ruled out the questions. But Hall said that Christy told him once that Mrs. Christy had been out till after 3 a. m. one New Year's Eve. At this point Mrs. Christy glared at her artist-husband and said shrilly: "You liar, you."

Mrs. Hall testified that Christy beat Mrs. Christy "like a dog."

Miss Britt, one of Christy's models, testified she worked for him two years and that he treated her like a gentleman.

Hall had testified that Christy compelled his models to appear before him in scant costume, and that there was much caressing between the artist and his pretty models.

Christy's aged father, Frank M. Christy, testified later in the trial that the artist's wife drank, was profane when drinking and had threatened to kill her husband. The elder Christy also testified that Purdy, the chauffeur, was Mrs. Christy's companion on drinking bouts.

Child Loyal to Parents.

A pathetic feature of the case was the refusal of Natalie, the child, to say a word against either parent. Judge Smith visited Natalie at the home of Christy's counsel, thinking to learn from her more detail as to the actual home life of the parents. When the judge returned he said: "The child is loyal to both parents."

Mrs. Christy returned to New York before Judge Smith gave his decison. She was bitter against her husband, saying: "I am through with Howard Chandler Christy forever."

After the court gave the child to the care of the grandparents, Mrs. Christy was reported to threaten divorce proceedings. Christy retorted that he would file a cross-libel if she did. It was thought by friends of each side that a reconciliation was hopeless, unless love for Natalie should bring them together again.

CURLEY SCORES OPPONENTS AT NOON RALLY

Councillor James M. Curley, at a noon rally in the grounds of the Walworth Manufacturing Company, South Boston, to-day devoted the greater part of his speech to a fierce attack upon his opponents, Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell and William S. McNary. He attacked the record of Mr. O'Connell while in Congress and declared him to be a "faithless servant of the people, but a faithful one of the trusts." Of Mr. McNary he said, "he is a traitor to Democracy."

Councillor Curley declared that the real issue of the campaign was the high cost of living and the remedy was the election of a man who would represent the people and not the "interests." He then turned his attention to Mr. O'Connell and said in part:

"Recreant to the spirit of Democracy of which he has been the faithless servant of the people who have elevated him to congressional office, Mr. O'Connell now seeks to delude the people after his shameful betrayal of their interests, in the presentation of interest which are not only trivial but which should not have the slightest consideration upon the part of those people who have reposed in him their trust and which he has violated upon every opportunity that has come to him within the period of his active congressional life.

"What can the people hope to obtain by the reindorsement of a man who has proven himself false in the hour of greatest necessity? The record of Mr. McConnell as shown by the page of the Congressional Record of March 15, 1909, and March, 1910, should forever bar him from the consideration of men of the Democratic faith, and who by wise laws seek to relieve the condition of our people, made intolerant by trust domination, and of which by reasons that are not within the understanding of his constituents. He served his masters of the privileged interests."

The management will open the show with everything complete.

IS IT ISITT OR I-SITT? GENEE SAYS "I-SITT"!

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—Adeline Genee, the little dancer, who arrived on the steamer Kronprinz Wilhelm, brought with her a new husband and a pronounced bump of sensitiveness regarding the pronunciation of her new name. On June 11 she married F. S. W. Isitt, the London solicitor of the Duke of Newcastle, and when the ship news reporters pronounced the name "Is-it" she cried: "Oo-oo, you dreadful Americans. It is not 'Is-it' nor anything so dreadful—it is 'I-sit,' and I wish you would remember that."

DO YOU KNOW THE FULL VALUE OF A GOOD DICTIONARY?

THE ABOVE may appear a simple question and one easily answered, but when you consider the large number of people who believe a dictionary to be nothing more than an authority on the spelling and pronunciation of words you must admit that the question is quite pertinent. A good dictionary not only tells the proper pronunciation of a word and the correct spelling of it, but it explains the source of the word—the origin of it—how it can be used properly, and familiarizes you with it in every possible way.

In addition to the helps rendered in the uses of individual words, a good dictionary is filled with advice on language study—statistics needed in business life—grammatical and rhetorical rules—and is a storage warehouse of right information.

Pope said: "The proper study of mankind is man." This can well be paraphrased into "The proper study of language is dictionary."

Everything that the great publishing house of G. & C. Merriam Co. can put into 817 pages of dictionary has been put into Webster's Condensed Dictionary, until it is all meat—no fat—and readers of the American can have one of these books on the following basis—a different bonus for each different binding:

No. 3—Webster's Condensed Dictionary—complete and amplified with charts and colored maps—bound in full black morocco—7 consecutive Dictionary Coupons and 95 cents.

Dictionary Coupons will be found on Page 2 of the Daily and Sunday American. You can start a set of seven any time—the set must contain 7 coupons cut on 7 consecutive days.

"CHEIRO," WHO MADE MILLION, IS A BANKRUPT

LONDON, Sept. 21.—After clearing up more than a million dollars by the practice of palmistry and blackmail in New York, Newport, Paris and London, and after having swindled Count Rudolph Festetics of Hungary, who married a granddaughter of James B. Haggin, out of a million francs, "Cheiro" has been declared by the London court of bankruptcy to be worth just $50.

His fortune all gone, with debts of $216,330 standing against him, with sentence of thirteen months imprisonment hanging over him in Paris, and hated and feared by thousands of women dupes in two continents, this adventurer, palmist, journalist and financier has come to the lowest ebb of his fortune.

He is worse off to-day than he was years ago, when, under his real name of Jack Warner, he was a page in a hotel of Belfast, Ireland. Warner was a handsome curly headed youngster, and when he went to London with the idea of becoming an actor he met Oscar Wilde, who gave him a smattering of palmistry and took him to the Duchess of Sutherland's house one evening where he introduced him as "Cheiro," a great palmist from India, and in an inimitable manner painted a picture of romanticism and mysticism that was absolutely gulped down by the entire party as truth.

Oscar Wilde's Pupil.

Under Wilde's schooling "Cheiro" became an adept in the wild, mystic tales of Indian magic and with fake poisoned rings and charmed jewels, along with unsurpassed knowledge of human nature, he made a wonderful success.

After practicing in London for a while he went to New York, where, after obtaining the skeletons of nearly all the important families in the American metropolis by foolish women coming to him and exposing their private lives, he obtained the opposition of the New York police and returned to London with $200,000 to his credit from his American experience. He became the rad in London, but Scotland Yard began an investigation, and "Cheiro" went to Paris.

In Paris Warner met a man who called himself King of Sedange and Hamon, two small islands near the Malay Peninsula. This king was really Count Meyrena, an Italian adventurer and explorer who had come upon the two cannibal islands and in some way had had himself proclaimed king.

Founds Banking House.

At any rate the king gave "Cheiro" the title of "Count Hamon," and as Count Hamon "Cheiro" founded the financial house of Hamon & Co., and for three years he carried on a brokerage business. Among his customers were many American women and Count Festetics, who in January, 1909, charged him with retaining possession of stocks which they had given him to negotiate.

"Count Hamon" fled to London, and while he was not extradited his creditors pursued him and forced him into bankruptcy.

LESS DRUNKENNESS IN GREAT BRITAIN

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—Sobriety is in the ascendency in England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales, and licensed public houses are decreasing in number, according to statistics communicated to this Government by Consul General John L. Griffiths of London. The decrease of drunkenness is attributed, primarily, to the increase in the price of whisky and the diminution of social status. In England and Wales the decrease is nearly one-tenth. The decrease in Scotland was 19 per cent. In Ireland the percentage of decrease from 1908 was 8 per cent.

FOUND, MIND BLANK, AFTER 2-YEAR HUNT

Becker started on a short business trip to Madison two years ago when his mind suddenly became blank. Mrs. Becker heard a year ago that her husband had been killed. She collapsed at the news and since then has been a paralytic.

WHITE IN NEW AVIATION STUNTS

Thoroughly familiar with the Harvard aviation field upon which in nine days flying he earned over $30,000, Claude Grahame-White now promises to give a more complete program of "sports on an aeroplane" in a single day than was seen during the nine days of the Harvard meet.

The young Englishman, who came to Boston almost unknown and who from the first day of the big meeting proved to be the stellar attraction, will have the Harvard field to himself Saturday when he is to give a demonstration of aerial navigation. The performance, given under the direction of B. F. Keith, is to be a popular one, the admission price being fifty cents to every part of the field. Thousands of Boston people who had no opportunity to see a flying machine at close range will crowd the stands Saturday.

The program as outlined by Mr. Grahame-White contains a number of "circus" stunts which no one dared attempt during the meet. Seventeen feats besides high and fancy flying are outlined in the program. The attempt to break the world's record with the rebuilt Bleriot and the dive of a thousand feet with a passenger are among the sensations promised.

SETS FIRES WITH OLD SPECTACLE LENSES

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 21.—Henry Clay, a San Diego fireman, has been placed on trial in the Federal Court, charged with having started many disastrous ranch fires. These fires always started when he was miles away armed with an alibi, and the ranchmen came to look upon him with superstitious awe and long refused to testify against him. At the recent big fire at Jamul, however, Federal detectives found two of his "traps." These were old spectacle lenses arranged on wires so that the sun's rays would focus on matches and leaves and start the blaze.

FIND BOGUS COINS IN PRISONER'S ROOM

WOONSOCKET, R. I., Sept. 21.—A crude counterfeiting apparatus, the police believe, was found in the room of Oscar Bolis, aged thirty-five years, a Finn, who pleaded guilty in court on the charge of drunkenness. The police searched Bolis' lodging and found several half dollars, they claim, in various stages of manufacture, a revolver, two small packages of ground glass, an instrument resembling a pair of tongs used by gas fitters, with some chunks of lead bearing the impressions of nickels, quarters and half dollars. The police think the capture is important.

CHARGE ACID USED IN MARSHMALLOWS

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 21. — Twelve warrants were obtained here by H. C. Cassidy, special agent of the State dairy and food department, for the arrest of manufacturers of marshmallows, who are charged with selling candies unfit for use. It is charged they placed in their product sulphurous acid, which is said to be the main body of cheap marshmallow candies and to be highly deleterious.

UNDERTAKERS COME TO BURY LIVE MAN

BROOKLYN, Sept. 21.—When Dr. L. H. King, a dentist, answered the door bell at 3 a. m. he found an undertaker had come to bury him. Two other undertakers arrived soon also with telephone instructions to prepare for burial the body of a man about sixty-five years old. Fully one thousand delegates from all parts of the State, with their women guests, are expected to be present when President Burton Steere of Springfield delivers the opening address.

The convention will last three days, closing Friday evening. Judging from the large number of delegates who have already arrived and those who have signified their intention of being in attendance before the meeting is over, the convention this year promises to be the most successful ever held by the association.

Addresses of welcome will be made by Mayor Meehan and Chief Engineer E. S. Hosmer and the responses by President Steere and others.

Ball Game a Feature.

Elaborate plans for the entertainment of the delegates and their friends have been made under the direction of an able local committee. The headquarters of the convention are at the New American House. The convention will close Friday afternoon with what is expected to be one of the features of the gathering, a ball game at the New England League park here between teams from the Lowell and Boston fire departments.

Another feature will be the parade of the regular men and apparatus of the Lowell department Friday morning. The parade will start at the Central fire station on Palmer street and will pass through Shattuck street to Merrimac, to Central, to Tower's corner, wher it will be reviewed and dismissed.

To-night there will be a reception to the women guests and the visiting delegates. To-morrow night there will be a big theatre party at the Lowell Opera House for the women guests, following a visit to Canobie Lake in the afternoon. On Friday the members of the Lowell Board of Trade will place a number of automobiles at the disposal of the guests and a tour of the city to all points of interest, including the famous Merrimac valley automobile course, will be made.

Banquet Friday.

UNITE FOR NEW SUBWAY ROUTE

One hundred Boylston street merchants have formed the Boylston Street Merchants' Association, the object of which is to secure the location of the proposed Riverbank subway, under Boylston street.

In 1907 the Legislature passed an act by which the course of the Cambridge subway was fixed. By the law the new subway was to extend from the Park street subway station to the Charles River embankment and thence westerly to the Harvard bridge.

The Boylston street merchants, arguing that the change in the traffic from Cambridge, and scores of suburban towns, will injure them and lose for the street whatever value it may have as a business location, are up in arms to gain reconsideration, and, if possible, a repeal of the law.

A civil engineer is drawing plans to be used in the arguments and an attorney will be engaged to conduct the campaign.

The work of the association is in charge of Secretary Daniel A. Griffin. Abbott T. Maynard, of Maynard & Potter, is chairman of the association and Burton Rockwood Miller, of the Miller & Sons Piano Company, is treasurer.

AUTOMATIC FIRE ESCAPE AT HOLLIS

The Hollis Theatre is equipped with a new fire escape apparatus which works automatically. It is permanently installed upon the exterior of the building. Just as soon as the second step of the fire escape is touched it releases automatically a lever, throwing the lower section to the ground and puts it into position for descent. It is the invention of Hans Johnson, the machinist of the theatre, who has had it patented.

STREET BOYS' EYES BEST, BUT COLLEGE BOY HAS THE BEST EARS

Dr. Siegfried Block, physician and sociologist, has just completed comparative tests between 100 boys of the street and 100 freshmen from Columbia in order to get into the psychology of "gangs."

His results show that the boy of the "gang" type has better eyesight, more speed and can estimate time better than the young college boy. On the other hand he has found that the college boy has better hearing, is more accurate, has a better memory and better sense of touch.

Dr. Block selected the street boys from recognized gangs, bands of young men who prowl the highway at night, getting into mischief and frequently into serious trouble. He selected the same number of freshmen of the same age and then began his human and psychological clinic.

Dr. Block says that he found that the vast majority of the freshmen came of better stock than the boys of the gang type and that among the street boys 46 per cent. had at least one parent addicted to strong drink. He declares that it would be rare to find such family history among the freshmen.

Right Ears Abnormal.

With the gang boys Dr. Block found that 12 per cent. had abnormal right ears and 8 per cent. abnormal left ears. He suggests that the hearing of the gang type becomes dulled through listening for the footfall of the policeman and through boisterous talking and singing at their street sports. On the other hand, the eyes of college boys are made less strong because of steady use of them in books.

The investigator joins with others in attributing self-tattooing to degeneracy. In the Columbia swimming tanks he found no cases of this, except among the fraternity boys, who are required to have the insignia of their fraternities tattooed above their heart or high up on the arms.

"This latter custom of college secret orders is compulsory," he points out, "and can hardly be compared to the marks of individual egotism so extensively displayed. Of the 100 street boys, 14 per cent. were tattooed on the left arm, 8 per cent. on the right arm and 10 per cent. on other parts of the body, a total of 32 per cent. The marks were usually nude figures, serpents, national flags and initials."

In a test of hearing four times as many street boys showed dull ears as the freshmen.

Gangs Encourage Pugilism.

Dr. Block points out that in the street gangs the boys aim to excel in pugilism, crap shooting and pool playing, while in the college the students strive to excel each other in mental advancement and in acquiring knowledge. He advises the use of farm schools for the street boys.

Telling of methods he believes would aid in reforming the gangster, Dr. Block says:

"The 'farm school' plan is a much better one than the boy club plan. If a boy wishes he is taken from the city and placed on a farm after a course in elementary farming. The temptations of a big city are so far distant, the wholesome air, the good food, added to the removal of the friends to such a distance, offer a good way of changing the environment.

"The writer has known of at least four cases in which real vicious criminals have become honest, hard-working farmers. I would go even further and offer only one remedy to solve this problem. In every arrest where it is proved that the cause for the legal breach was due to 'gang' environment, directly or indirectly, despite protestations of friends or relatives, an indeterminate sentence to the country should be enforced.

Benefits Are Many.

"The benefits from such a plan socially and economically to such a country as this are almost beyond the limits of this essay to enumerate.

"The congested districts would become somewhat relieved of overcrowding, especially of the immoral and evil spirits.

"The farms would be better cultivated and the help cheaper.

"The food supply would be greater and its cost less.

"The succeeding generations would benefit by the improvement in the present one.

"Many of the 'workhouse' regulars would be taken care of, and the city relieved of their cost and maintenance.

"This form of treatment is especially applicable to the juvenile delinquent. His character is more easily moulded and his health more quickly improved."

RESULTS OF EYE AND EAR TEST ON STREET AND COLLEGE BOYS

Boys who prefer the streets to college have better eyesight, more speed and can estimate time better than freshmen in Columbia University.

Of a given number of boys used in tests, the street boys showed twelve per cent. with abnormal right ears and eight per cent. with abnormal left ears, listening for the footfall of the police probably dulled their hearing.

Thirty-two per cent. of the street boys had tattoo marks, showing evidence of degeneracy.

Forty-six per cent. of the street boys had one parent at least addicted to strong drink.

Columbia Freshmen proved themselves superior in memory, accuracy, hearing and touch. They come of good families, and this tells in education.—DR. SIEGFRIED BLOCK.

LANGFORD AND JOHNSON CLASH IN A VERBAL BATTLE

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

RED SOX BATTLE TO WIN TO-DAY'S GAME AT ST. LOUIS

The Family Upstairs Don't Want Dingbat's Sheep, They Have His Goat—By Herriman

JOHNSON AND SAM HAVE NEW TALKFEST

By RAE MURDOCH.

Jack Johnson, champion of the world, and Sam Langford, the Boston "tar baby," got together to-day, harangued each other for twenty minutes, flashed rolls of bills, bankbooks and things and then separated without coming any nearer to making a match or posting a forfeit than they did a year ago.

Before they parted, Johnson made this statement:

"I'm the champion of the world. Sam Langford is the challenger. He has talked about putting up $20,000 to fight me. I came here to hear his proposition and see his money. I brought along $1,000 in cash and was ready to put up a cashier's check for the balance.

Awaits Langford Cash.

"Langford produced some money, not over a thousand dollars, but wasn't willing to make a match or post a forfeit. Any time he puts up his money, I'm there to cover it. He's been crying for a fight for a long time, and I'm here to give it to him. But he didn't show anything to-day. Any time he puts up his money I'm there to cover it. I'm here to give him a fight. He don't want one."

Sam Langford and Joe Woodman, his manger, showed first at the office of the sporting editor of the Boston Globe, in accordance with an agreement he and Johnson made last night at the Armory A. A., where they had an exciting meeting in the ring. Johnson wheeled up a few minutes later in his speed wagon. A big crowd followed him and blocked Washington street while the negotiations were going on upstairs. Johnson was alone.

Has Check for $20,000.

He walked into the office, seated himself on a roll-top desk in a corner and got right down to business.

"I understand, Mr. Sam Langford, that you want a fight with me and you're here to put up $20,000. Now, I got a cashier's check for $20,000 and you can get the money on it whenever you want it. Let me see the color of your money, Mr. Sam Langford."

Joe Woodman, who was sitting near Johnson, muttered:

"Aw Johnson, don't come along with that stuff any more. Put up your $20,000 in money. Let's see it."

"I'm the champion," grinned Johnson, "and I don't have to put up any money."

"But you said last night that you'd meet us here at 11 o'clock and be ready to put up that money," said Woodman. "Now you make good or keep still."

Shakes Fist at Champion.

"I'm the champion, I say," retorted Johnson, "and the champion don't have to put up any money. You've been talking about having $20,000 to fight me. Let's see it. I'll tell you what I'll do, just to show good faith," Johnson went on, growing a bit heated. "I've got a thousand dollars right here (and he pulled out a big roll of bills). I'll put that up and you put up the same amount. Let 'em both ride until to-morrow noon. If either of us fails to come across with the other $19,000 by to-morrow noon, the other fellow gets his $1,000. Now, that's fair, Mr. Woodman."

"Aw, put away that toothpick," shouted Langford, getting into the argument for the first time. "Come up with your $20,000. That check isn't worth a dollar. You've been stalling me now for a year."

"I fought you once," said Johnson, "and I beat you."

"I was a baby then,' responded Langford.

"Well, I'll make a baby out of you again," laughed the big black.

Langford jumped across the room until he was right in front of Johnson. Shaking his finger at the champion, he said:

"Listen to Me, Child."

"You've been handing out hot stuff all your life. Last night you said you'd be here to make a match with me. Now you're crawling. You've got a tack there in your hand. You don't want any fight with me and you know it."

"Aw listen to me, child," said Johnson, in a fatherly tone, towering over the Boston scrapper. "Now quit your kidding. I'm willing to give you a match. But I'm the champion and I don't have to put up till you do. I'd give you a match without a side bet, Sam Langford, but you know as well as I do that two black men never drew a thing. You don't see any clubs around offering any $20,000, $30,000 or $40,000 for a match.

"Now, my time's worth money. I'm getting $2,000 a week in the show business and 25 per cent. of every nickel that comes into the house. I'll lose $20,000 to fight you. That's why I want a side bet. Anybody who comes along with an offer of $50,000 for the fight, I'll accept it without any side bet. But you don't see anybody doing it."

As Shakespeare Said.

"You said last night——" put in Woodman.

"Never mind what I said last night," Johnson answered. "That was Tuesday, as I remember it. To-day is Wednesday. Like Shakespeare said, I had a little sleep and I thought it over. I'll yield the point on what I said last night when I was a bit excited. Now, I'm going to make you put up the money.'

"I'm like Rip Van Winkle, only he slept twenty years before he woke up, and it only took me twenty minutes to wake up." At which there was a roar of laughter.

"Just as soon as I came East, gentlemen," said Johnson, "I left my money with "Tad" and Mr. Hicks of the New York Journal. I guess they gave it to their editor, or put it in the safe. Anyway, it was there to meet your money, Mr. Langford. Now this is good"—pointing at his check book. "Ain't it, Dan?" He showed it to Dan Saunders, the putative stakeholder, who nodded.

"Never mind that, Jack," said Woodman. "Put up the money and we'll cover it."

"Why don't you cover the $1,000 I've got here, then?"

"I've got just as many thousand dollars as you have," interrupted Langford, producing a roll himself. "But you've got to put up $20,000."

"Well, I've made my proposition," said Johnson. "When I was looking for fights before I was champion they made me put up my own money. Now you've got to do the same thing. You don't mean business. My time means money, and if you're not going to do anything I'm going."

Orders Auto to Move.

A policeman was outside demanding that Johnson move his auto, which was blocking the street. Johnson coaxed him to wait a minute while he and Langford posed for a picture. Then Johnson went to Woodman and said:

"I've got to go away now. I'll leave this matter with Miah Murray and I'll be there any time your money is up."

After Johnson had left Saunders showed a letter from the Superintendent of Police saying that it would be illegal to hold the money.

"Johnson knew that, I guess," said Woodman.

STIFFEST WORK OF SEASON BY HARVARD SQUAD

The Harvard football squad ran up against the stiffest work of the training season this morning at their regular daily practice, and for an hour the men sweated and panted under the coaching of Assistant Coaches Greene and Burr and Trainer "Pooch" Donovan.

The linemen especially were the sufferers from the hot pace led them by the men in charge, and were heartily tired out when the signal for the conclusion of morning practice was given.

Charging Machine Used.

For the first time this year the linemen were sent after the charging machine, and the heavy roller was pushed all over the lot, weighed down by the heaviest men the coaches could find the purpose.

But the linemen showed that they have plenty of beef, and their work was highly satisfactory to the men who are guiding the training of the squad during this preliminary business.

Another feature of the morning's work which was not particularly enjoyed by those who were forced to take part in it, was the practice in "starts" which occupied the attention of the squad for fully fifteen minutes. Instead of starts it was more like twenty-five-yard sprints, and with few exceptions the men found themselves tired out and panting at the conclusion of this exercise.

Backs and Ends Out Longer.

The backs and ends, having lighter practice, were out longer, a greater part of them being on Soldier's field for over an hour. The linemen were sent in after forty minutes under the hot sun.

Passing the ball, falling on the pigskin, and the usual minor details of preliminary practice, all tending to make a man fast on his feet were in order for about twenty minutes.

Accurate Punting.

The kicking squad, practising punting, consisted of Corbett, O'Flaherty, Felton, Wigglesworth and Graustein, who booted the leather far and wide, and really got off some fairly long and accurate punts. Meanwhile, Captain Withington and Bob Fisher tried dozens of drop kicks from the thirty-five yard line.

The practice was considered the hardest yet, and the linemen were not anxious to begin afternoon training at 3:30, although every man reported and did his best. Scrimmages will not be held in all probability until a day before the Bates game, which opens the season next Wednesday.

SPEED BOYS HOPE TO SINK BROWNS IN THIRD GAME

BATTING ORDER.

The Red Sox clash with the St. Louis Browns again this afternoon for the last time this season. By winning yesterday's game they made a record of twelve games won and three lost to the St. Louis men, and a win of to-day's game would mean a practical clean-up of that team for the entire season.

The victory of yesterday, coming after straight defeats in the Windy City, and another loss to the Browns, appear to have brought the boys back to the basis where they were when they left Boston for their expedition to the West. Accordingly chances favored another win for the Red Sox this afternoon.

Collins is slated to appear in the box for Boston, and Bailey will probably be on deck for St. Louis.

There is no big league game in town to-day, Fred Lake's warriors taking a rest after the strenuous work with the Pirates. The day's delay is caused by the fact that Cincinnati, scheduled to play here to-morrow, finishes up her schedule with the Phillies to-day in her last game of the year with the Quaker City bunch.

HAND TUBS MUSTER AT BROCKTON FAIR

BROCKTON, Sept. 21.—Hand tubs and their crews from all over New England will participate in the mammoth muster at the Brockton Fair this year, and the biggest purse ever offered for a muster has been hung up by the fair muster committee—$1,550. The event takes place on the last day of the fair, and the Red Jackets will have things all their own way, for on that day—Firemen's Day—the vets own the grounds, so to speak.

There will be nineteen prizes, ranging from $300 to $10, for the best streams, and three special prizes, two of them for the companies throwing the shortest streams. A new concrete playing platform will be erected, and other innovations in the muster line will be at the dispotal of the vets.

BOSTON BOXER IS LOSER IN PHILLY

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 21.—Young Sammy Smith of this city at the Douglas A. C. bested Eddie Murphy of Boston in a six-round bout.

Young Erne was to have shown in the windup, but while boxing with Larry Ryan the night before last the latter's head got in contact with Erne's right eye and split the upper lid. Erne's physician forbade his boxing to-night.

JOHNSON'S PROTEGE BESTED BY HARRIS

PITTSBURG, Sept. 21.—Morris Harris of New York had much the better of George Cotton, protege of Jack Johnson, in a six-round bout before the Union Club. Cotton lost much ground in trying to land swinging uppercuts a la Johnson, but not one of them reached after the second round.

JOHNSON MIXES UP WITH SAM AT ARMORY

The meeting at the Armory Club which led up to to-day's confab was not on the bills. It was entirely unexpected, and formed a highly dramatic finish to the all-star bouts at the club. Johnson's entrance was the signal for Langford to climb over several spectators and get into a position to hurl his defiance at the champion.

When Johnson denied that he had run away, as charged, from Langford or his manager, who claimed to have had a $20,000 forfeit posted in New York some time ago, Langford gave him the lie direct.

Then flashing a wad of money, Johnson shouted:

"Here's $1,000 to $10 that neither Woodman nor Langford ever posted a forfeit in New York."

"I'll fight you in any club, in a barn, in a cellar, or in an aeroplane," screamed Langford.

Then Johnson got busy. With the suave manner of Jim Corbett he walked from the corner to the centre of the ring and chirped:

"If Mr. Langford or his manager can show me where I can make more money than I am making now I will cover his forfeit to-morrow, if he says so. I was in New York for three weeks when Mr. Langford's manager, Mr. Woodman, was supposed to be ready to post that $20,000 we have heard so much about. But I didn't see it and I couldn't see a sign of either one of them when it came to posting this big sum of money.

"I came over here just to see about this very matter, and I am not going to run away. I understand that the reason that they did not post that money was because they could not find a stakeholder. I am willing to put up my $20,000 with any Boston newspaper."

Now as to the real battles. Jimmy Walsh outclassed Young Britt of Baltimore, Dave Deshler and Willie Lucas fought a good draw, and Jumbo Wells, the Australian, landed the K. O. on Billy Rolfe in the second round. Outside of the verbal battle between Sam and Jack the Deshler-Lucas bout was the best feature.

Britt flashed for just one or two rounds in the ten-round session. He was game to the core, a willing mixer and showed ability to use both hands and hit from almost any angle. But in Walsh he ran up against a clever ring general, and the science of the little veteran and his ability as well to deliver a much stiffer punch have probably resulted in Britt's coming to the conclusion that he is not in Jimmy's class.

The bout between Dave Deshler and Willie Lucas was declared a draw by Referee Flaherty. It was a fairly just decision, although Lucas might have won the award on a hair-line decision. Lucas scored oftener in the open work, but he was more on the retreat than the Cambridge boxer, but offset his evasive tactics by scoring cleanly on Deshler.

The bout between Billy Rolfe and Jumbo Wells lasted less than the two full rounds. Wells, who hails from Australia, knocked the South Boston fighter cold in two rounds. There was nothing to it.

GOLF GOSSIP CLUB NOTES

The new amateur champion of the country won his first match after he had won the title at the Myopia Hunt Club. Mr. Fownes with George Ormiston played in a foursome against T. G. Stevenson and Albert Seckel, the intercollegiate champion. Mr. Fownes won for his side on the home green, 1 up, when he ran down one of his long putts for a win.

Tom McNamara, the well-known Boston professional, has been breaking records galore this season and it was only a day or so ago that he visited the Cohasset Golf Club and, playing with Samuel Johnson, Esq., lowered the record for the course to 73. His card was:

Out	4	4	6	4	4	3	3	4	5	37
In	2	4	6	4	4	3	4	4	5	36	73

The Women's Golf Association of Boston has announced their Fall schedule and will, as usual, have an active season. The first meeting is Friday, September 23, at the Brae Burn Country Club. The competition will be eighteen holes medal play.

The method of scoring the matches in the women's association is as follows:

For team matches—One point for being on the winning team, two points for being present, three points for winning a match.

For medal play—Two points for handing in a score, one point each for the ten best net scores.

Another new Country Club! The Wellesley Country Club which supports a nine hole course. Massachusetts is fast using up her open space for golf courses. Slowly but surely the game is making its way into the heart of America. Look out for the holes on the Common!

HARVARD SQUAD IS PUT THROUGH LIGHT WORK ON GRIDIRON

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

YANKS' MANAGER GOES TO NEW YORK TO SEE FARRELL

STALLINGS SEES FARRELL ABOUT YANK SQUABBLE

CHICAGO, Sept. 21.—The battle royal which has been waged for some time between George Stallings, manager of the New York American Baseball Club, and his first baseman, Hal Chase, promised a speedy settlement when the manager prepared to leave Chicago ofr New York this afternoon on the Twentieth Century Limited. Stallings has been recalled by Owner Farrell where the trouble is to be remitted as soon as possible.

During the absence of Stalling, Thomas Davis, secretary of the club, is to hold the helm of the Highlanders. Stallings admitted his recall to-day, and stated emphatically that at a near meeting with Mr Farrell he "Would settle the trouble once and for all."

"I am going back to straighten out this tangle," said Stallings. "I am sick of the war and trouble and a rigid remedy is needed. I shall place before the president the exact satus of the trouble with Chase. Each player knows the condition existing to this club.

Stallinge Expects to Win.

"I think I will win my fight. I may be mistaken, but you may take it from me that I am going to be in the big show next year. If not in New York, then somewhere else. I prefer New York for many reasons. First, with one or two exceptions there is the utmost harmony between myself and my men. Among my players I number some of my dearest friends, and I would be like tearing my heart out to have to quit them.

"I am proud of my Yankees. They are a credit to me and to New York city. There is not a rowdy on the team. Everywhere we have gone this season I have been complimented on their gentlemanly behavior. On the ball field they are fighters, one and all. They do not know what defeat means. I am apologetical enough to believe that I have had a great deal to do with developing this club into a championship possibility, and naturally I wish, if possible, a chance to see borne the fruits of the hard work we have put in together.

Players Like Manager.

Stalling intends to put up a stiff fight for his job. He is still mute on his side of the case. So is Hal Chase. From the sentiments expressed by the rank and file of players the only line of the situation can be determined. The players express every confidence in the ability of Stallings and believe that in another year they could win a championship. They give the Big Chief credit for whatever progress the club has made since he took charge. One of the players who has this year proved a baseball sensation declared last night that the players would appeal in a body to Mr. Farrell if necessary.

It is strongly rumored that Chase may be traded as a result of the New York conference. However, in contrast to this idea, certain fans declare that Chase stands high in the estimation of Farrell and that his position is in no danger.

USE MEGAPHONE ON GRIDIRON TO EXPLAIN GAME

There is no doubt that the football rules committee has done its work conscientiously and probably with excellent results, but no provision has been made for the enlightenment of thousands of men and women who will see the big matches at Cambridge, New Haven, Princeton, Philadelphia, West Point and other places this Fall. Unless one studies the rules with unusual care and memorizes many important things, he will find himself at sea watching the new style of play.

So many different offences can be committed for which there are penalties that the average spectator, who in former years could guess whether a team was guilty of holding or offside play, will be at a loss to know what is going on unless there is some effective method employed to chronicle the rulings of officials and the reasons therefor.

Megaphone Men Needed.

It has been suggested that it might be an excellent plan to provide official announcers, who could megaphone short infinite points to the spectators. Either that, or the use of a huge bulletin board devoted exclusively to such announcements. It is believed would fill the bill.

Changes in the lineup of each eleven hitherto have been made known with little or no system at some of the big games, so that in hundreds of cases spectators have been kept in total ignorance of the identity of men making star plays.

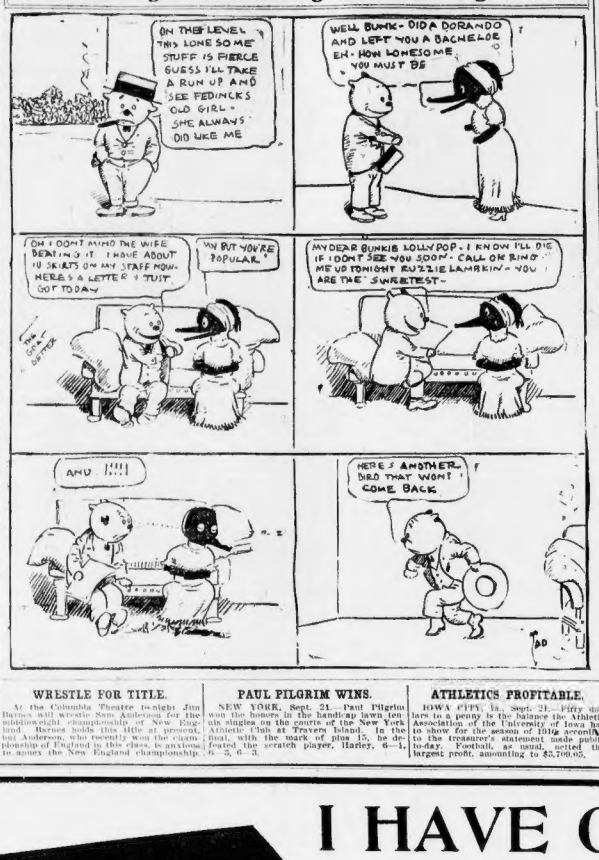

Those who have long desired to see these evils remedied say the rules committee should devise some system of publishing the details of play so that in future persons not altogether familiar with the new game would not be mystified. There is plenty of time, even now, to institute such reforms, and the various college football managers can take the matter into their own hands.

Leading Colleges Should Begin

To provide the necessary information will not require much labor or expense, it is thought, and the game can be made clear to every one. If Yale, Harvard, Princeton and Pennsylvania will take the initiative in this matter it is believed other universities and colleges will follow their example and football will become even more popular than it at present.

A clear knowledge of the new rules can not be obtained without careful study and the average football enthusiast may not have the time to devote to this department of the game. That is why it is urged that the football managers should institute some system by which every important detail of play may be chronicled without delay. It is believed there are plenty of well posted young men at the colleges who would jump at a chance to be of service in this direction.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—Paul Pilgrim won the honors in the handicap lawn tennis singles on the courts of the New York Athletic Club at Travers Island. In the final, with the mark of plus 15, he defeated the scratch player, Harley, 6—1, 6—3, 6—3.

ATHLETICS PROFITABLE.

IOWA CITY, Ia., Sept. 21.—Fifty dollars to a penny is the balance the Athletic Association of the University of Iowa has to show for the season of 1910 according to the treasurer's statement made public to-day. Football, as usual, netted the largest profit, amounting to $8,760.65.

AUTO DRIVERS PROTEST SCHOOL

GLOUCESTER, Sept. 21.—The professional chauffeurs of this city are preparing to enter a formal protest against the establishment of a department in the High School to be devoted to the instruction of boys in the driving and repairing of autos.

They say the new course which is established by John Hays Hammond, one of the school committee, will "throw on the market" scores of boys willing to work for five or six dollars a week through the summer vacation, thus lowering the present wage of drivers which is from $20 to $25 a week. The professionals have already sent a long signed protest to the local papers.

The school committee, at a special meeting, accepted the offer of Mr. Hammond to furnish an instructor of chauffeurs for the Gloucester High School, a departure never before considered in this country. A room will be fitted up with a car and appliances and for the present Mr. Hammond's French chauffeur will act as instructor.

BROCKTON BOYS MADE GOOD IN NEW YORK

BROCKTON, Sept. 22.—"Chick" Raymond of this city, last season captain of the Brown University baseball team, and acknowledged the best amateur catcher in this section of the State, has been lending a smart crew of players in Oneonta, N. Y., this season. The team, whose members hail from this city and vicinity, and who are all Brown University varsity players, have journeyed and will return to their studies next week. The boys had great success, and but few knew where they had been playing during the Summer. Raymond had on his staff: Joe Reilly, 2b.; Orcutt of North Adamton, 3b.; Ray Nash of Weymouth, ss.; Staff, p.; R. Nash, c.f.; McGorty, r.f.; Snell, c., and Bliss, l.f.

DALEY BACK IN YALE LINEUP

LAKEVILLE, Ct., Sept. 21.—The feature of the Yale football practice to-day was the first light formation of the season. The scrimmaging included every play which is possible under the new rules.

The scrimmaging took place at the morning practice, and lasted ten minutes. There were no new coaches present. The team was run by Coach Harry Hoit and George Ade. They ordered the following lineup: L. e., Philbin; l. t., Scully; l. g., Fuller; c., Morris; r. g., Paul; r. t., Tomlinson; r. e., Brooks; q. b., Howe; l. h. b., Robinson; r. h. b., Capiula Daly; f. b., Fields.

Captain Daly and Robinson made long runs, but were not allowed to carry them into touchdowns. The players showed that they do not fully understand the new rules, and there was considerable confusion over some of the plays that were tried. The players were unable to forget the old rules relating to tackling and interfering.

ALLEN HAS SHADE ON HUB FIGHTER

ALBANY, Sept. 21.—Billy Allen of Syracuse, had a shade the better of Young Nixon of Boston in their ten-round battle here. The mill was a hard one throughout. The first five rounds were perhaps the fastest seen in this city. Nixon's best round was the third, while the fifth was a shade in his favor also.

WOLGAST MATCHED WITH TOM CARY

CHICAGO, Sept. 21.—Ad Wolgast and Tomy Cary were practically matched to-day to meet at he Fond du Lac, Wis., Athletic Club for a ten-round battle September 29. Wolgast is to receive 55 per cent. of the gross receipts.

My Present Quarters
And Announce Preparations For

REMOVAL

After ten years at 305 Washington St., my business has grown to such proportions that I must have room. For the past few seasons it has been necessary for me to rent the fifth floor of 309 Washington St., but even though I have pushed back so that I occupy many thousands of feet more than when I first leased this building, and had to tunnel under my present store, I have no room, and I am going to move; and I promise not to carry one yard of my present stock to the new building. Everything must be sold during the next few weeks. Now I want to call your attention to this sale. These goods are all brand new heavy weight Grays, Browns and Olives and all the neutral shades. When I ordered these goods I understood that I could not get my new building ready before June 1, 1911, but arrangements just completed mean clean up now. My doorway will be filled with samples of suitings or overcoatings which comprise my stock. The price for any style will be and take your pick. This offer is without limit and means 3-piece suit any style.

$9.00

MY NEW HOME

which will be located at 281 Washington St., will be the finest equipped Tailoring Plant in the United States. My architects, C. A. & F. N. Russell, are at work on the plans, which I intend to publish in the course of a few weeks.

The lower floor and basement will be used for salesroom and cutting rooms and will be in white enamel with the finest lighting effects to be procured.

The second floor will be occupied as a Wholesale Woolen Dept., where I intend to have a display of woolens second to none, carrying out my color and lighting scheme, which will be adopted throughout the entire building. On this floor will also be a complete cold water sponging plant.

On the next floor will be my model tailor shops, where Mitchell customers can see their garments made under the most sanitary conditions. I expect this branch of my business will occupy two entire floors, and I intend to spare no expense, as nothing but the finest will satisfy.

MATINEE HORSEMEN CHAT OVER AFFAIRS AT THE SPEEDWAY

WALSH PUTS IT OVER BRITT AT THE ARMORY A. A.

As a Dramatic Editor Jeff Has Nick Young Lashed to the Mast — By "Bud" Fisher

PROMISE HOT FIGHT IN SCHOOL LEAGUE

It looks as though the fight for the flag in the Boston High School Football League will be one of the closest in years, as the lighter teams will be greatly benefited by the new rules, whose speed will be one of the big factors. English High and Dorchester are not members of the Boston High School League, but, nevertheless this will not have much effect in deciding which school has the best team in the city as both of these elevens have games scheduled with the stronger members of the league.

Change in Instructors Works Wonders.

The big shift of the athletic instructors announced last week appears to have gone a long way towards booming athletics in some of the outlying schools, which have been woefully weak in the past. A striking example of this is seen in the case of Brighton High.

For the past few years Brighton has been practically dead as far as athletics have been concerned. With the coming of John O'Reilly, who will have charge of Dorchester and Brighton, a new interest has been awakened among the boys and they are now planning to launch a football team to enter the school league.

It is more than likely that Commerce and English will have to fight it out among themselves for the football championship honors, as is true in most all of the other major sports. This year the English High athletics are in the hands of Jim Crowley, former coach of Commerce, who, while at the Fenway school last season, developed two championship teams, the wearers of the Blue and Gray capturing both the basketball and baseball titles. With this hustling Noddle Islander at the helm things are bound to hum at the Montgomery street school.

John O'Donnell at Fenway.

At the Fenway school the reins of government are in the hands of John O'Donnell, one of the most promising athletic instructors in the city. Dorchester is bound to make a great showing both in the Interscholastic League and in its games with the Boston High School teams with the veteran O'Reilly in charge of the team.

Roxbury, East Boston, Brighton, Boston Latin and Mechanic Art High will also be strongly represented [illegible] that a successful year is expected all around with "bloodless" foot[ball] bringing the lighter teams rapidly to the front.

The lads are now practicing passing and falling on the ball, punting, running down under kicks and other rudiments of the game, besides listening to lectures on the new rules.

HORSE NOTES and SPEEDWAY

W. L. La Croix of Lynn was an interested spectator at the "Mets" races and stated that his well known trotter The Sailorman, 2.14¼, was in the market.

* * *

Bob Thompson has gone to the Vermont State Fair races at White River Junction with the pacers On Wilkes, 2.14½, and Lady Bingen, 2.16¼, and a green pacer who is said to be a fine prospect, by one of the McEwen family.

* * *

G. Pray Smith, the popular chairman of the "Mets" racing committee, started his four-year-old chestnut trotter, by Baron Courageous, 2.26½, dam by Mascot, at the Norway, Me., races, and in the 2.40 class this fellow earned a mark of 2.24¼, and then starting in a second event earned a bracket of 2.21¼.

* * *

C. C. Mayberry, the School street real estate expert, and well known Maine horse breeder, started his green six-year-old bay mare, Nancy Bingen, by Bingen, 2.06¼, dam Princess of Monaco, by Imported Meddler, second dam Nancy Hanks, and she stepped for a record of 2.23½ at Norway, Me., and won her first race in three straight heats.

* * *

Geiger, 2.15¾, never looked better in matinee racing than he did at the opening of the "Mets" races. His two half-mile heats in 1.04¼, were easy for him, and there is a lot of fun racing left in this fellow yet.

* * *

A. J. Furbush was greatly missed at the opening races at the Charles River Speedway. He was thrown in driving a wild and wooly Western horse, and while the injury is not a serious one, it will cause his keeping to the house for a few days.

* * *

G. Pray Smith turned in an excellent bit of work as starter at the "Mets" races. The regular official, Arthur L. Power, was away upon a business trip. Mr. Smith kept the drivers well in hand, with the result that the racing card of ten events was over at 5 o'clock.

* * *

That five-heat pacing race, which inaugurated the "Mets" season of racing for the Fall series, and which finally went to the gray pacer Grenadier, owned by L. H. Kingman, was the cleverest split heat matinee event seen for many a day in amateur racing. It required five heats to determine the winner, and it was a close contest in every heat, except the fourth, when Thistle had an easy time because of the breaks of the field.

* * *

George A. Law of the Fellsway Driving Club says that his former green pacer Venture, unmarked, will start at one of the New York Fair races this week.

* * *

Herbert Ralston declined to start his clever trotter, Little Bill, 2.20¾, at the Framingham Fair, because he considered that six-heat race at Weymouth, and the drive in going and coming, about all the little trotter could stand in a single week. And anyone who saw that smashing race at Weymouth will agree with Bert's conclusion.

* * *

The gray pacer, Tony D., 2.16¾, who was formerly owned and driven in the "Mets" matinees at the Charles River Speedway by Fred Adams, is now in the hands of J. H. Rowe, the Athol reinsman.

* * *

George D. Merrill has sold the matinee trotter, Earl King, unmarked, to B. W. Gove. "It is the first time that I was ever without a fast stepper," said Mr. Merrill, in discussing the disposition of his former speedway crack.

DRIVES HORSE 1,000 MILES

Monroe Goodspeed, the Brookline horseman who has been one of the best known drivers over Boston roads for two generations, has just completed a remarkable drive with his brown mare, Helen Gould, 2.11¼. Mr. Goodspeed started upon a drive of over a thousand miles and proceeded from Boston to Nashua, N. H., and then outlined a trip of six weeks, in which he made a schedule of thirty miles a day, and which he lived up to except upon two days, when the heat was intense, and he retired his mare.

After leaving Nashua the drive was through Manchester, Hopkinton, Henniker and Newport to Claremont, where a stop was made before crossing over the State line into Vermont.

Starting from Claremont, Mr. Goodspeed drove his clever trotter to Bellows Falls, South Woodstock, Royalton, Northfield, Montpelier, Hyde Park, Morrisville, Eden, Montgomery and at Richford crossed the boundary line into Canada.

In the Dominion Mr. Goodspeed drove to Abercorn, Quinsville, Trallsburg and Farnham to St. John and then again across the Canadian border into New York State, where, after journeying about the country, he at a point near Plattsburg, crossed upon a barge over Lake Champlain and after visiting Poultney and Ludlow, started upon a return journey to Brookline.

Mr. Goodspeed is one of the deans among Boston's road drivers, and the trip he has taken with the trotter, Helen Gould, is probably one of the longest drives undertaken by a Greater Boston reinsman in many years. He is most enthusiastic over the six weeks' trip and declares it one of the finest experiences in his busy life as a reinsman. Good weather was met throughout the six weeks' journey, and a splendid recreation trip enjoyed in every sense of the word.

LIVINGSTONE STICKS TO RUBE MARQUARD

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—Rube Marquard may be the $11,000 lemon which has been touted since he joined the Giants, but he has one sturdy champion in Pat Livingstone. The last year that Indianapolis won the pennant Livingstone, Owen, Bush and Rube turned the trick for Carr. Paddy caught 119 games that year and always caught Marquard.

"Never mind what anybody tells you about Rube being a lemon," said the earnest champion of Marquard. "I tell you he is just as good a pitcher as there is if he has somebody who can catch him and steady him down. He's inclined to be a little wild, but I could always manage him.

"Rube has everything. He's got more speed than most pitchers; in fact, I think that there are only two or three who have more. He's got a dandy bunch of curves, and he's a pitcher. I'll bet right now that if Connie Mack had a fellow like Rube on his staff he'd make a grand twirler out of him. I know that he can pitch."

Paddy also says that "Bull" Durham, also a pitcher on the [illegible] must have made a world's record. He says Durham pitched five double-headers that year and won the entire ten games.

"SOUTHPAWS" ARE TO LAJOIE'S LIKING

The absence of left handed hitters from the Nap line-up has not added to the chances for Lajoie to cop the big auto. Larry can murder southpaw pitching, but the Naps have had so few offside batters this season that other managers have not cared to risk their sidewheelers against them.

There is no telling just how much difference more left-hand pitching would have made in the big fellow's mark for the season, but that race is liable to be so close that even a point will decide it.

Managers don't figure the Naps very strong, but just the same they never miss any chances to use their best twirlers against them. Every time Addie Joss was in the game the Naps had to bat against some pitcher ranked among the best in the league, and Cy Young never gets any very soft proposition. Russell Ford, who is good enough to win a big majority of his games, has worked his share against the Naps, and every time they play the Athletics Connie Mack saw fit to use Bender, Coombs and Morgan as often as he could. Johnson, Mullin, Willetts, Donovan, Walsh and the other leaders have also done a lot of work against the Cleveland club.

On account of getting his drives safe on an average of more than once in every three times up, Larry has been called upon to make the hit-and-run play more than any other player on the club. With this play on he has to hit a lot of bad balls, for he was compelled to swing with the runner on the go, and could not wait for the ball that suited him.

PHIL M'GOVERN IS HANDED A LACING

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—Joe Coster checked the championship aspirations of Phil McGovern by giving Terry's brother a hard beating at the Fairmount Athletic Club. The bout went ten rounds.

STRAIGHT TIPS FOR SPORT FANS

Why not get all these scrappers in one big tourney like that golf battle last week and give the title to the last man on his feet. If they don't do that before long, I'll claim the welter weight title myself because I once trimmed Tommy Ryan in a game of poker.

O'TOOLE MADE GOOD STRIKE-OUT RECORD

BROCKTON, Sept. 22.—Marty O'Toole, the auburn domed twirler who pitched for Brockton last year, and who was bought by the Red Sox this season and later traded to St. Paul, American Association, comes home with a modern-day strikeout record that has not been bested this season. He was pitching for Sioux City in the Western League against Lincoln when he fanned eighteen batters. [illegible] sixteen men in the [illegible] years. Rucker accomplished the feat over the Cardinals last season. Glade turned the trick against Washington in 1904 while Waddell struck out sixteen Athletics in 1908. Marty will spend the Winter at his home in South Framingham after completing his visit here.

BARS SCHOOL ATHLETICS.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 21.—Interscholastic athletics have received a kick in the eye in this city. There will be no more big games between the high schools. Athletics will be confined to interclass games. The faculty holds that more students are given a chance to take part in sports when the games are confined to contests between the classes than when the athletic strength of the school is concentrated in one big team.

HILLMAN DONS FOOTBALL TOGS

HANOVER, N. H., Sept. 21.—Punting, place kicking, working on the bucking machine and signal practice is a summary of the work done by the Dartmouth football squad to-day. With only one more day in which double practice can be held the coaches drove the men as hard as they could in order to fit them for the first scrimmage which comes Saturday.

Harry Hillman made his initial appearance in the role of a football coach. The starting of the backs has been particularly sluggish, and Hillman has been called in by Coach Randall to teach them the fine points of the starting game. After preliminary practice the following men were chosen for the first team line-up:

Needham, centre; Farnum and Whitmore, guards; Sherwin and Holstead, tackles; Lewis and Ashwede, ends; Ingersoll, quarter; Ryan, right half; Morey, left half; Hoban, fullback.

BURKE ENTERS WORCESTER.

Jimmy Burke of Wakefield High School, who holds the 1,000-yard New England schoolboy record and is regarded as one of the best half-milers in this section, has decided to enter Worcester Academy this Fall. Burke graduated from Wakefield High last June and after a two years' course at Worcester will go to Yale.

Even now you may not believe it — but we have convinced thousands of other intelligent men that we make the best suit of clothes in Boston at anywhere near $15 to $25 — our prices.

BOSTON AMERICAN'S DOUBLE

Two Women---A Study in Contrasts

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1910, by American Journal Examiner

TWO women who had passed the three-score and five-year mark were encountered in one week. Each looked her age; but the difference between the two was as wide as the universe.

One as quietly dressed and her hair pleasingly looped about her sweet and kind face. She spoke softly and only when she felt called upon for speech; and she listened well.

She was tolerant and kind in her views of individuals and epochs.

She did not thrust her age upon the listener, but she spoke of events which had transpired during her lifetime, and made no effort to seem younger than she looked.

She left the impression on those who encountered her of a fine garment which had been folded in sweet lavender.

The other woman was much bewigged and blazed with diamonds. Her face was as hard as flint, her mouth thin and cruel, her eyes cold and critical.

SHE HAD NO CHARM

There was not one vestige of youth or the charm of middle age about her personality. She was an old woman, but she talked to women of thirty-five and forty as if she were their contemporary.

She dragged the subject of age into conversation continually, referring to it as something in the remote distance.

She spoke of younger women, especially of those who were distinguished for their charms, with veiled criticisms.

Scandal and unkind gossip she conveyed in adroit language; and always after she ceased speaking one felt as when the sting of a chill east wind has blown through an open window.

The young people of the day were characterized as ill-bred and vulgar, and life was referred to as a farce which must be endured, and disillusionment as a certain result of experience.

All that money could bestow had fallen to the lot of this woman during her entire life.

THE RICHER OF THE TWO

The other had known the need of rigid economy until, in her old age, competence had come to her.

Yet was she not the richer of the two?

Every young girl who reads these lines is facing old age if the angel of death does not call her to finish her career in other realms sooner.

Which type of an old lady seems the most admirable?

If gentle speech and kindly views of life and people, if attractive manners and sympathetic and loving habits of thought are to obtain in old age, they must be practiced in early life. We do not suddenly become transformed.

The critical, fault-finding, carping, severe old woman is a creature to be avoided by men, women and children.

The kindly, patient, companionable old lady is a joy and a comfort to all who know her.

Which type do you think you have begun to emulate?

It is only a little step from youth to maturity.

The Ethics of Flirting — By Dorothy Dix

If Men Have the Privilege of Flirting, Before Marriage, It Is Woman's Inalienable Right

DR. EMIL REICH has been lambasting American women again in a London paper. He says that they have no "pectoral momentum," and that they know nothing of love or friendship, and that that is why they are guilty of the heinous sin of flirting.

The charge that American women are human icicles has been made so long that nobody thinks of seriously refuting it any more. All foreigners enjoy a happy faith in believing in that superstition just as our fancy delights in painting every Italian woman as a languishing-eyed beauty, and clothing every Spanish woman in a lace mantilla and picturing her as spending her time gracefully smoking a cigarette or dancing the tarantella.

Of course, a closer acquaintance discloses the fact that not all Italian ladies are beautiful, nor do they even all have dark eyes, and that the Spanish donnas wear straight fronts and hobble skirts, or whatever is the fashion of the moment, and are exceedingly busy with their babies and their housekeeping, instead of rattling castanets.

Likewise, a real investigation into the physiology and psychology of the American woman would disclose that in her veins flowed good, warm, red blood instead of ice water, and that she can run as high a temperature and have as great a "pectoral momentum" as any of her sisters of other nationalities when the right man comes along.

The charge that American women are human icicles has been made so long that no one thinks of refuting it.

She Has Lived Her Love

If Dr. Reich and the other critics of the American woman want to know whether she can love or not they should take account of the women who have followed their men into the wilderness; who have left every comfort of civilization to brave the hardships of a frontier life; who have lived in shacks and dugouts on the prairies and lean-tos in mining camps; who have gone down into the valley of the shadow when they bore their children with no chance of medical help, and often even without a other woman to minister to them, and who did all of this gladly and unrepiningly for the sake of the men they loved.

And these women left behind them other women who, in a different way, are daily giving the same exhibition of how they can love. There are tens of thousands of women in America to-day who are offering up their very lives on the altar of their husband's success, who are killing themselves by inches toiling and saving and scrimping to push forward their husbands' fortunes, and who patiently and humbly efface themselves not to mar their husbands' glory or to block their husbands' progress.

Hath any woman greater love than this?

As for flirting, the difference between the American woman and the European woman is that the American woman does her flirting before marriage, as a usual thing, and the European woman does hers afterwards.

Marriage initiates the European woman into the love game, but in ninety-nine times out of a hundred when an American woman is married she throws down her cards and drops out of the game. To her way of thinking she has won the prize, and there is nothing more to play for.

Naturally, human nature being what it is, there are always people who will get hurt in any game. There are clumsy people who will break their necks falling over their own golf clubs; reckless fools who will bet their pile on a pair of deuces; serious people who will bring nervous prostration on themselves in over indulgence in ping-pong or tiddledewinks. Hence there are those so blind and stupid that they cannot distinguish between real love and playing at love, and those may occasionally suffer from heart injury from the effects of a flirtation.

Advantages of Flirting

Taking it by and large, however, and leaving out the flirtation, there is no doubt that before marriage flirtation is a most healthful and edifying pastime, and where it is recognized as a legitimate sport, it promotes the chances of matrimonial felicity, and of people making a wiser selection than they could under other circumstances.

It affords a man an opportunity to get acquainted with a girl before he commits himself. How is the man who never sees a girl except in the bosom of her family, and who never hears her talk anything except the mere platitudes of the day, to know what sort of a woman she is, what intelligence she possesses, whether she is the sort of a fascinator that could keep her husband entertained to his dying day or a bore who would send him forth in a week to his club for entertainment.

The man who dances attendance on a girl in what we call a flirtation, and who makes near-love to her, gets a very shrewd idea of her character. He can fathom her vanity and get the measure of her weakness and her strength; he can tell by the deftness or clumsiness of her thrust and parry how she would meet most of the exigencies of life; he can judge by what she'll stand for and what she won't the very fibre of her nature.

I know an extremely hard headed, rich

Woman's Power in Matrimony Is Only the Veto; Flirtation Is the Only Path to the Altar old man who says that he never goes into any big business deal with a man until he has first played poker with him. By the way the other man plunges or hedges; by the recklessness or caution with which he plays; by the foolish risk he takes, or the chances he lets slip by him; by the very temper he displays when he wins or loses, this old banker sizes him up.

By the same token there are few better ways of getting a line on a woman than a little flirtation with her—playing the love game with her. If she plays fairly and squarely, she is all right. If she cheats, she is dishonest and not to be trusted. If she doesn't know how to play at all, she is a chump, a dead heavy, unimaginative, unromantic creature that will set as solidly on your heart as soggy buckwheat cakes for breakfast do on your stomach. Avoid her.

A little flirtation with a woman—playing the love with her—gives a discerning man a good insight into a woman's character.

Woman's Inalienable Right

If men have the privilege of flirtation before marriage, it is woman's inalienable right. Under a system of idiotic convention that does not allow a woman to openly woo her mate, flirtation is the only path that leads to the altar.

Woman's power in matrimony is only the veto power, and in order to have some collection to select from, and not to have to take any man that asks her, she is obliged to lure as many men into her parlor as she can. She has got to act as if she was charmed, entranced, hypnotized by every man who comes along, in hopes that the right man will come after awhile.

Flirtation also gives a woman the chance to test her own emotions, and find out if what she is experiencing is real love or simply delight at having taken a new captive to her bow and spear.

Often and often a woman finds that the man who first thrilled her, palls upon her; that the man whom she thought at first her ideal fails to wear well, that the footsteps that once gave her palpitations superinduces, after awhile weariness and boredom.

Her whole happiness in life depends upon finding out this in time, and on the safe side of the altar, and this valuable knowledge she can only secure by indulging in a little discreet flirtation.

Without doubt flirtation after marriage is a dangerous and a grievous thing, but before marriage it is just the skirmish before the battle in which a man and a woman try out not only each other's sentiments, but their own, and it should be encouraged rather than discouraged.

Married Life the First Year

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

NO. 18—STILL THE MOST WONDERFUL TIME

ALL that Helen had ever read or heard about a mother's care before the coming of her child she now tried to put into practice.

The reading of [illegible] herself from [illegible] thoughts [illegible] pleasant things [illegible] of light [illegible] ers and pretty things about her.

To her diet she gave the most careful regard—plenty of fruit and nourishing food. She drank no more coffee or tea, but a great deal of milk and always a glass of warm milk at night.

Faithfully every day after luncheon she would lie down for a nap. She was [illegible] boring [illegible] that w[illegible]

[illegible] the life was giving her of its best.

She had long neglected her piano, but now she spent hours playing softly, dreamily, sweet old-fashioned melodies that she played [illegible] ear, while her mind hovered about the wonder of the next few months [illegible]

Her Keener Sympathies

Even the hand-organ man received an unusual number of pennies. She seemed to find a melody in his grinding airs that she had never [illegible] before. [illegible] seemed to her a new pathos in the old and withered Italian couple, who day after day pushed by their heavy organ, looking up to the windows for pennies that so rarely came.

Helen's sympathies were keener, and the demands on them more frequent than ever [illegible]fore. She could pass no beggar no blind [illegible] without [illegible] Warren who had always been [illegible] opposed to promiscuous alms-giving now made no protest when she asked him to "Make that poor old man something."

And when he dropped a coin in some [illegible] hand, she would press [illegible]

"Now that we [illegible] so happy it seems so [illegible] see unhappiness in others. If one could only help them all in some real way—some way that would give them courage and hope. Oh, there is so much suffering—I seem to see it more now than ever before."

"But you mustn't, dear. Now is the time you mustn't think of such things."

Warren Is Kinder

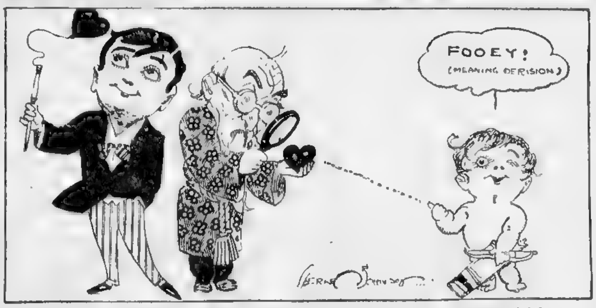

"Oh, I know, I know, and yet I can't [illegible] I feel everything so much more [illegible] And the children—the poor little children [illegible] ignorance [illegible] a chance? [illegible] help those [illegible] themselves."

"[illegible] mustn't dwell on things like that! If you think of them at all, try to think that there is an eternal justice in all things and that somewhere, sometimes, all that now seems hard and cruel will be made right."

Warren had never been given to moralizing [illegible] she surprised him[illegible]self in his desire to comfort and reassure her. And her trust and clinging dependence on him now was complete. She took to him all the little perplexities and [illegible] which [illegible] she would never have bothered him before.

She was no longer afraid of him, she no longer hesitated to ask his advice or help in anything that might contribute to her comfort or peace of mind. For she felt that it was not only her welfare that was to be considered, but the welfare of something so dear to them both.

Who Is Beatrice Fairfax?---By Beatrice Fairfax

And little Cupid laughs aloud at the foolish guesses at the identity of Beatrice Fairfax

"WHO is Beatrice Fairfax?" I half rose from my seat in the subway and felt like holding up one hand and calling "Present!" as I used to at Sunday school.

It was rather a unique experience—that of hearing myself discussed by three utter strangers so sat still and listened.

"Who is Beatrice Fairfax?" went on the other. "I am a stranger here and I have heard you speak of her several times."

So, I listened some more, and this is what I heard.

"I," said a young woman in a Turkish turban and a large blonde pompadour, "am an 'intimate friend of an intimate friend of an intimate friend' of Beatrice Fairfax's and I know for a fact that he is an old man."

"I have never heard that, said her companion, "but I have heard that Beatrice Fairfax was a man."

I sat behind them in the subway and my first impulse was to exclaim, indignantly: "Do I look like a man?"

Thought Too Particular.

On second thought I refrained, however, and listened with all my ears to the rest of the conversation.

Is it dishonorable to listen when strangers are talking about you? There is an old saying that "listeners never hear good of themselves." Well, this listener heard things that were good and things that were not.

The blond lady in the Turkish turban thought I was too particular about some things.

"If Beatrice Fairfax is an old man," she said, scornfully, "he ought to know that when people have no mutual friends to introduce them it is perfectly proper for them to speak without an introduction. I have met a great many men in that way," and she tossed her blonde head in a way that showed her utter scorn for the conventions.

"Well, I don't agree with you, Cora," said her little dark-eyed companion. "If Beatrice Fairfax is a man, then he knows how men feel about girls they can speak to in that way. But," she added, "I don't believe she is a man."

"Good little girl," thought Beatrice, who wanted to hear more and yet was half afraid to.

"I wish," went on my little champion, "that I knew Miss Fairfax.

"She once helped me decide a very important matter, and I would like to thank her personally."

I was tempted to tell her that she had, but I looked at the large blonde lady in the Turkish turban and hadn't the courage.

Suppose she should face me with that [illegible] question thought I would I have the courage of my convictions and tell what I thought?

If it were possible, I would like to meet personally all the girls who have written to me. But if I were to do that, I would have scant time left for my work.

And after all it is much easier to pour out your heart on paper than to actually speak the words. The girls talk to me more freely through the paper than they would if they talked to me personally.

Satisfied With Womanhood

It is amusing to think of myself as an old man when I wouldn't even be a young man, not for all the freedom in the world.

Men have many privileges which women are denied, but they are not privileges which specially appeal to me, always, of course, excepting the privilege of the ballot.

I am quite content to be a woman and very appreciative of the privileges accorded me.

But the next time I overhear any one saying that I am an old man, or a young one, either, I think I'll have to pluck up courage and say, "Please, ma'am, or sir, as the case may be, I am not a man."

Cheap Travelling

By WINIFRED BLACK

Three hundred and twenty-five Americans came home in the steerage on one ship the other day.

I'll warrant at least 250 of them went over in the first cabin.

Poor things! They'd probably been reading the articles in the "Heart to Heart Corner" of some of our great magazines, telling them "How to do Europe on $5 a week."

I know five teachers who go abroad every other Summer. They are gone two months and a half and their trips cost them just exactly $225 apiece all around. That includes their tickets over and back, railroad fares, hotel bills, tips, etc.

But from the time those women set foot on foreign shores they do not eat one square meal. They nibble lunches and take coffee and rolls for breakfast, and they stay at third or fourth class inns and tip the waiters with coins that mean about the twelfth of a penny.

That's all right—if you want to do Europe that way; I'd love to do it that way myself. I believe you'd see more of the people and of the country in a week than you see in six months at the smart hotels.

But the average American wants to eat, and he wants a comfortable bed, and he wants some place to take a bath, and he wants a fire when it's cold, and screens in the windows when there are flies, and all these things cost money, and they cost a whole lot of money—in Europe.

I think I'll write a series of articles for the provinces.

I shall call it "Boston and Return on Twenty Cents a Day."

I shall tell how you can get a room for ten cents a night, and all the meals you want for ten cents apiece, and you can, if you want, get the sort of rooms and the sort of meals in the sort of neighborhood where such things are for sale at such prices.

Why wouldn't it be romantic to go down into the Ghetto and board with a family without a word of English in it, eat what they eat, sleep as they sleep and breathe as they breathe?

It seems to be the thing to do in Europe; why wouldn't it be a success in Boston?

What a good headline you could get out of it—"Seeing Boston for Thirty Cents a Day"—and how enthusiastic you could be over the automobiling and the supping and dining and the theatreing—of other people.

That's the way you're supposed to do in Paris—just look on and see other people eat. I wonder how it would go in America?

Put money in your purse, my good American, put money in your purse if you're going abroad, or else make up your mind to live in less comfort while you're there than your ashman lives in when he's at home.

SPOILING THE FEAST.

MARY was a little girl who did not like to wait, but one day her mother, having several guests, Mary was made to wait anyway, so just about the time dinner was under good headway she poked her little curly head in at the dining room door and said: "I don't care if I do have to wait, that was an old sick turkey anyhow."

Misplaced Sympathy

By FRANCES GARSIDE.

COMING out of St. Paul one night, my attention was called to the sobbing of a woman in the berth opposite mine, who was saying good-by to "Willie." "Willie" was perhaps forty-five, and the woman was near the same age, and she sobbed in a manner that made my heart ache. "It may be good-by forever," I heard her say with her face buried somewhere in "Willie's" shirt front, "and I can't bear to let you go like this. I have always tried to do my best, Willie; you will always remember, won't you, Willie, that I always tried to do my best?"

And I thought how many women there are who are trying to do their best for some "Willie," and whose sole recognition is the kind that cracks the collar button, and I turned my face to the window and cried. Everything out of doors began to go by in a blur.

The trees and hills were submerged, the houses floated away, and in my sorrow for the woman I was rapidly drowning the whole world, and did not hear "Willie" leave the car, nor know that her sobbing had ceased, when some one tapped me on the shoulder, and I heard a voice say, "You poor thing. Tell me what's troubling you." I turned around and there was the woman of the tears, a broad smile on her face, and a big wad of chewing gum in her mouth! I managed to tell her that I was crying because she cried, and she threw back her head and laughed till she almost swallowed her wad.

"That was my husband," she said, "and I always cry like that when I leave him for as long as two weeks. He thinks I will mourn to death over the separation, and it pleases him, and doesn't hurt me."

That night before I went to sleep I pinned seven sopping wet handkerchiefs to the hammock in my berth, to dry, and to each one I pinned a moral and a resolution.

Desperate Desmond

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner

That prison haircut doesn't make any hit with Rosamond at all. Claude doesn't look a bit like a hero without those flowing locks. Desmond doesn't look like a villain, either, with that spinach on his chin.

Desmond has thrown aside his disguise and now Rosamond knows who ordered Claude's curls harvested. And, worst of all, there's nothing doing in the pardon line, for Desmond will take care that she doesn't see the Governor.

What's the use of an innocent man staying in prison when he can tunnel his way out like the Count of Monte Cristo. Ever read that book? No? Great stuff! All about a guy that broke jail and found seven billion dollars.

In the meantime, the Board of Aldermen has ordered the prison moved back from the curb line. The millionaire who lives next door said the building obstructed his view, and of course that settled the matter right then and there.

All this time Claude is digging to beat the band. His hands are blistered and his new striped suit is getting all mussed up; but what cares he! All he wants is his liberty and a bottle of hair restorer. But will he get it?

Alas, no! He will not! Here he is right back in his old cell, and it's almost time for another hair cut. Do you suppose Desmond had anything to do with moving the prison? Possibly he did. However, the next pictures will appear very soon.

Boston's Smart Set Very Busy at Home and Abroad

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

With half our world of fashion in Europe and the other half scurrying wildly about at home trying to get themselves comfortably settled for the Autumn season, there are few left to really do things, so there is little real excitement in smart set circles these days. There are many just arriving from Europe, also, and the festivities being given as their welcome make up an interesting part of the social program.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred D. Foster of Brush Hill road, Milton, with their daughters, the Misses Dwight, Frances, Hilda and Evie Foster, have just returned from a two months' tour of England. Other welcome arrivals from Europe include Mr. and Mrs. Josef Adamowski of Walnut street, Brookline, and their children, who have been passing the Summer at the Hotel Bristol, in Warsaw, Poland.

* * *

The Philip Lydigs, who have been spending the Summer abroad, visiting the various fashionable spas and baths, are concluding their tour with an automobile trip through Italy and are soon sailing for home. Mrs. Lydig will spend much of the coming Winter with her sister, Mrs. A. Robeson Sargent, at her home in Brookline.

* * *

The Leverett Tuckermans of Bay State road are to remain abroad until after Thanksgiving, and will be guests of their daughter, Mrs. Louis Chapin, at her home in London prior to their return.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. David P. Kimball of Commonwealth avenue, who have been spending the Summer in Europe, are in Paris. Mrs. Charles Lowell of Fairfield street and Miss Mary Lowell, who are accompanied by Louise Hellier, have recently arrived in London.

* * *

The T. Lindall Winthrops of Beacon street, who spend their Summers at the Isle of Wight, have been for some time in Germany. Boston has been further represented in Germany by Mr. and Mrs. Moorfield Storey of the Fenway, who since sailing for Europe last May have been touring extensively on the Continent. Mr. and Mrs. Storey have just returned to America.

* * *

At last accounts Dr. and Mrs. Horace Packard of Commonwealth avenue, who have been for some time on the Continent, were in Holland staying at the Hotel du Vieux, Doelen, The Hague.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Edward Davis of Gretystone Farm, Dover, who spent some time in Paris, have gone on to London, as have also Mrs. C. H. Watson and family, who have also been in Paris.

* * *

Miss Anna Almy, daughter of the Charles Almys of Cambridge, has returned and is being roundly welcomed by her many young friends in the University City.

* * *

Mrs. Charles Whitmore, formerly of Beacon street, but later of the Ludlow, and her sister, Countess Rene de Cortlogon of Paris, are at the Hotel Victoria, Interlaken.

* * *

Eliot Cowdin Bacon, the youngest son of Ambassador and Mrs. Robert Bacon, who graduated from Harvard last June, arrived in Pekin, China, recently, on his way around the world. His classmate, Charles Devens Osborne, who is taking a similar trip, was in Paris at last accounts.

* * *

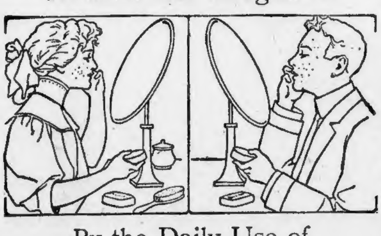

Mrs. James Jackson, who has been abroad since early Summer, and has since been the guest of her sister, Mrs. Smith, who of late has made her headquarters in Venice, is planning to sail for home early in October, and will open her Fairfield house on the 12th.

* * *

Among other Americans who have spent some time on the other side and have just returned are Mrs. Charles Blake of Beacon street and her son, William O. Blake, who sailed early in June; Mrs. Thomas B. Aldrich, who has been motoring extensively with a party of friends and has gone to her country place, Redman Farm, at Ponkapoag, where also are Mr. and Mrs. Talbot Aldrich; Mrs. Kilby Page of Brookline, Miss Margaret Warren, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Winslow Warren of Dedham; Miss Susan Amory, a sister of Mrs. Gordon Dexter, who sailed in May, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Young of Dorchester.

The Country Boy

A Romance of the Stage from Behind the Scenes

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner

SYNOPSIS

HIRAM BELKNAP is the leading citizen of Fairview. He is the lawyer for the railroad, the boss politician and the only man in the village who boasts an automobile.

His heart is wrapped up in his daughter Jane, who combines the beauty and dash of a Diana, with the ideas and enthusiasm of a high school belle. She is the hope and despair of every village youth on whom she beams. Two of her foremost suitors are Tom Wilson, the son of a widow, whose husband had been a close friend of Belknap, and Hezekiah Jenks, the lawyer's clerk and secretary, who has hopes of a political career and dreams that Jane may be induced some day to share it and encourage him in it.

While Tom is the one openly favored by Jane, Hezekiah craftily—in a hundred and one useful ways—worms himself into the esteem and good grace of the father—his employer. While Tom is motoring about with Jane in her father's car Hezekiah shrewdly presents the bills for damages sent him by neighboring farmers whose stock has been run down in the roads.

Papa Belknap gradually comes to believe that his drudge, Hezekiah, is a pretty good, industrious sort. Hence, when "Hez" humbly asks one day "if there would be any objection to him as a son-in-law?" the old man replies, "I certainly won't object to you, if she wants it that way." Hezekiah is thereby transported to the seventh heaven of delight.

Mrs. Wilson, the widow, has mapped out a career for her headstrong, willful son. The resources left at the death of her husband have almost reached the vanishing point. So she seeks the advice and comfort of her old friend, Lawyer Belknap. She has asked him to map out something by which her son may make a start in life.

Belknap emphasizes her visit by having his servant, in the absence of Jane, prepare tea. After a talk over old times, in which there steals a faint memory of bygone romances, the widowed couple take up the subject of young Tom Wilson. The mother waits, eagerly, while the lawyer adjusts his glasses, coughs ominously, and begins:

"He has disappointed me," he says.

The widow's hopes appear to be dashed.

Belknap then tells of the offer he made Tom to take him into his office, and how the offer was scorned because the salary offered was not as large as Tom thought it should be.

Mrs. Wilson then tells of her son's desire to go to New York, and while talking of this asks the lawyer what he thinks is the matter with her son. Belknap replies that she has held him too close to her apron strings.

While they are discussing Tom, Jane enters the room and then calls to Tom, who has been on an auto ride with her, but who has remained outside. She treats his mother affectionately and enters into the conversation that will show her that Tom has declined the lawyer's offer, which was made at her instigation.

When Tom enters his mother tells him she is sorry he refused Belknap's offer. Tom tries to defends himself by saying that it meant only $5 a week and he thought he was worth more than that.

Tom's driving of the Belknap auto has always been a sore point with the lawyer, as he has had to pay many bills for damage done by the machine. He learned that Tom has run into some of Hemingway's pigs and, knowing that it meant another money settlement, announces that the auto is for sale.

Hezekiah enters and in an aside between Tom and him the gauge of battle is thrown down. Tom warns him to keep away from Jane, whom he regards as his own private property.

CHAPTER IV. (Continued.)

"Perhaps we'd better see about that," said Tom threateningly.

Hezekiah, however, did not care to see about it in just the way Tom meant.

"You said I would come back, sir," he said to Belknap.

"That's all right," returned the lawyer. "I'm glad you did. I want you to run over to the office and bring me all those back bills of Hemingway's. All of them, from the time we first got the automobile. Get back as soon as you can."

"Yes, sir," said Hezekiah, starting for the door.

"And, Hez," Belknap called after him, "have that car put in the garage and see that it isn't taken out again."

"By nobody?" inquired Hezekiah, with a triumphant look in Tom's direction.

"Nobody. It's for sale. You'd better tack up a notice in the postoffice to that effect. Hurry now."

"Hemingway won't stick me again. Jane assures me that he opens his gate and shoos the live stock into the road, whenever he sees any car coming; and that's a State offence."

"That's exactly what he does," corroborated Jane, "he ought to be put in jail."

"You've got the right idea," laughed Tom.

"I'm sorry I can't stay and see what happened," said Mrs. Wilson. She turned to Tom. "Coming, dear?"

Tom Seeks an Interview.

"I'll be along, pretty soon," said Tom. "I want to talk with Mr. Belknap a minute."

Jane came quickly to bid the widow good-bye. "Going?" she said.

"I must," said Mrs. Wilson. "Good-bye, Mr. Belknap."

"Good-bye," said the lawyer, kindly. "Thank you for calling."

"I'll see you as far as the road," said Jane, tucking her arm through Mrs. Wilson's.

"Don't trouble," said the widow.

"I want a little walk, anyway," said Jane. "I'll be back in a minute, dad."

The field clear, Tom walked directly to Belknap, who had seated himself with much dignity, and was glowering formidably.

"Well, sir, what can I do for you?" The older man's voice sizzled with impatience.

But Tom was quite undismayed.

"What's your idea in getting my mother worried about me?" he demanded, with the easy impudence of twenty-five.

"I hope I haven't worried HER," Belknap put a meaning accent on the final word.

"She's up in the air a thousand feet," said Tom, taking the chair that had been offered him, and sprawling across it comfortably. "What have you been telling her?"

"Only what I thought it my duty to tell her," replied the ruffled lawyer. "She says that you want her to go to New York."

"I do," said Tom, "but I don't want to make my mother unhappy about it."

"It's not a question of her happiness, but of your future." Belknap was really in earnest. "I think she realizes that."

"I'm not going to New York till I can go right," said Tom. "Just at present I'm satisfied where I am."

"What do you mean by 'going right?' "

"When the opportunity presents itself." Tom's force of delivery did much to atone for the vagueness of his ideas.

"Don't you think there are opportunities here in Fairview?"

"Yes," sniffed Tom, "for some fellow that wants to be a town constable. Now Hez regards that job as the pinnacle of success. I want something better. The trouble with this town is there's a lack of enterprise."

"How do you make that out?" inquired Belknap, beginning to be amused by the boy's indomitable self-confidence.

Belknap Played by His Critic.

"Take yourself, for instance," continued Tom. "You are the leading citizen—the wealthiest man we have. Everybody looks to you for whatever is needed, but what have you done?"

"I've done my share, I think," he said, with haughtily complacence.

"Oh, yes," Tom went on glibly; "you've given us a soulder's monument that's increased taxation, and a library filled with books that nobody wants to read. Why don't you give us something worth while, something that is really needed?"

"For instance?" inquired Belknap.

"A newspaper," said Tom. "There isn't a town of our size in the State that hasn't a local sheet."

"We are too near the large cities to require a paper of our own," said Belknap. "We manage to get all the news."

"National news, yes," Tom admitted, "but how about the local stuff? I should think you would want one, if only to advance your own interests. You've exhausted the political possibilities of Fairview, and it's only a question of time till you'll want to go further. When that time comes, a newspaper will be necessary."

"How would that bring you oportunity?" queried Belknap.

"Why," said Tom, surprised at the old gentleman's obtuseness, "I'll run the paper for you."

"What makes you think that you are qualified for that position?"

With a flourish Tom extended a card which he had just extracted from his pocket. Taking it, dubiously, Belknap read:

> "This is to certify that THOMAS WILSON is the accredited representative of the Buffalo Express for Fairview and the immediate vicinity."

Tom had the look of a conqueror as he sat back in his chair with an expanded chest and awaited any reply that the lawyer could make to so clinching an argument as this.

Belknap waved his hand, wearily, as he tossed the card on the table.

"I don't think we'd better discuss this matter any further," he said.

Tom was crestfallen for but an instant. "Very well," he said. "That's up to you. But there's one thing I wish you would do."

"What's that"

'Leave Mother Alone,' He Warned.

"Leave mother alone. She has troubles enough, without worrying about me."

"You mustn't forget that I have a personal interest at stake," replied Belknap—"my daughter Jane."

"I am not worying about Jane," returned Tom, easily.

"Neither am I—now," said Belknap, snapping his jaws together.

"You mean——" Tom almost lost his nerve, "you mean it's all off?"

"I think," said Belknap, "you'd better let the matter rest until you've shown me what you can do."

Tom was still unbeaten.

"You don't think I can take care of her, is that it?" he asked.

"I have only your word for it," replied Belknap.

"Five dollars a week wouldn't do it."

Tom looked steadily at the lawyer.

"Can you do better in New York?" Belknap fancied that this was a crusher; but he was mistaken.

"I should say so," returned the boy. "Mr. Kennedy has offered to start me off at fifteen."

"Who?"

"James Kennedy, passenger agent of Central. Do you know him?"

"Very well, indeed."

Recipes for Canning Time

ORANGE MARMALADE

FOUR oranges, one lemon, eleven cupfuls of water, four pounds sugar. Grind four oranges and one lemon, add eleven cupfuls of water and let stand twenty-four hours. Then boil for one hour with cover off, then stand twenty-four hours. Then add four pounds sugar and boil until it jellies—about an hour more. Makes ten glasses.

CANTALOUPE PRESERVES

CUT up cantaloupe rind into one inch pieces. Put on stove and let boil in salt water. Drain off the water and for each cup of rind use one cup of white sugar and cup of water. Let boil until the rind is transparent, then flavor with any flavor you choose. A few drops of rose extract is splendid.

CANNED BEANS

BREAK the beans, instead of cutting them, cover with hot water well salted and boil until tender. Drain off all the water, add sliced onions and vinegar, sugar and pepper to suit taste. Let come to a boil and seal in fruit jars.

TO CAN WAX BEANS

TO can wax beans: Cut beans in one inch pieces, wash clean, put in kettle and cover with following: To one quart of water add one tablespoon vinegar and one tablespoon salt. Put on to boil. Let boil fifteen minutes from time they start boiling, put in air-tight sealers. Will keep for years.

GRAPE CATSUP

FULLY ripe grapes, four pounds; sugar one and a half pounds; one tablespoonful ground cinnamon, one teaspoonful salt, pepper and ground cloves, one pint vinegar. Cook grapes and sugar until quite thick, then add other ingredients and bottle for use.

PEAR CONSERVE

FIVE pounds of hard pears cut into half inch dice, five pounds of granulated sugar put on pears and let stand over night. Next day put on range with yellow rind of three oranges, juice of two lemons, one pound of raisins. Boil slowly for two hours or until quite thick. Just before taking from range add one-half pound walnut meats, broken into small pieces. This is most delicious. Put into pint jars.

TO CAN CORN

CUT corn from cob and for every nine cupfuls add one-half cup of sugar and one-half cup salt. Boil twenty minutes in two cups of water. Can while hot. This will make three quarts. Before using soak thirty minutes in warm water.

To-day's Best Story

"SPEAKING of smuggling as a somewhat questionable art," said Sir Pudon Clarke, formerely director of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, "once in traveling through Italy I was stopped on the outskirts of Florence by two customs officers. They proceeded solemnly to search my luggage, but found nothing dutiable until they came upon a small bottle of Chianti that I had purchased in Switzerland. It was half full.

"You will have to pay duty on this wine," they declared pompously.

"I got out of the vehicle, sat down by the roadside, drank what wine was left in the bottle and threw the bottle away; whereupon they were forced to permit me to carry the wine, minus duty, into Florence."

Jack and Jill

As They Might Have Been If the Novelists Had Had a Chance At Them

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

A Jack London Idea

DURING business hours Jack was a reputable business man with whiskers and a suite of offices on Fifth avenue. At night he had a habit of going about in his nightshirt, sinking his fangs into the faces of innocent bystanders. This made him rather unpopular, but he didn't care. He said it was atavism, and there were few dictionaries handy at that time of night.

Jill was a stenographer who worked in the all day and all night bank writing letters telling ex-bookmakers that their accounts were overdrawn. She was very busy.

They met one afternoon in a flat in Williamsburg, where she was attending an afternoon tea, given in honor of an acquitted dock superintendent for the Sugar Trust. The affair naturally was on a large scale.

Jack looked at Jill. "I love you," he said. "When a man like me loves, he knocks his inamorata down with a club. I hark back to the Stone Age."

"I'll hark back to the nearest police station if you hand me any more sweet nothings like that," said Jill.

Lashed into fury, Jack went out to sink his fangs into a passing automobile, but the automobile which barked back to a Pittsburg steel mill, saw him first.

Jack went up the hill that afternoon, but not to fetch a pail of water. The name of the hill is Greenwood, and it is a very pretty hill, dotted with beautiful statuary, all harking back with deaf ears to the Stone Age.

A Robert W. Chambers Version

Jack had eighteen million dollars, an inherited taste for gooseberry pie, which he fought down madly, and twenty thousand acres in Westchester County, stocked with wild boars. Jill was charming in her hobble skirt the morning that he passed her in his automobile, on his way up the hill.

At the top of the hill she called her maid, who pitched a dainty satin tent over her head. Retiring within, Jill came out in a hunting suit of khaki, with a knee length skirt, that set off the allure of her person.

Jack vaulted out of the automobile and pressed her violently to his heart. She felt the taint of his breath on her cheek. Helpless as an honest man in a State legislature, she gave her lips to him.

Suddenly she tore herself away. "It cannot be," said Jill, "I love another."

"Tell that to Robert Winthrop Chanler," said Jack, vaulting back into his automobile. "I'm going to get another hunk of gooseberry pie."

The sea moaned and down deep in her heart something prompted her to inquire: "Who's loony now?"

Fishin' Sayin' Good-By

FISHIN' sayin' good-by, that's the sign I know
Summer's on the last lap, jest about to go.
Fishin' sayin' good-by,
Sorry sings my heart,
Dreamin' of the sad days
We must drift apart!

FISHIN' sayin' good-by, not without a tear
Gleamin' in the sweet eyes of the world, my dear.
Fishin' sayin' good-by,
Every dewy dell
Dreamin' of the glad days
Of the fishin' spell!

FISHIN' sayin' good-by; fishermen, adieu!
Bonny be the bright life all the way for you.
Fishin' sayin' good-by,
Reelin' up the line
Fragrant with the green dreams
Of the grass and vine!

FISHIN' sayin' good-by at the gates of rose,
Swingin' in the sweet night to the even close.
Fishin' sayin' good-by,
Here's the line, the bait;
Mists upon the lowlands,
Autumn at the gate!

BROOKFIELD IS OBSERVING ITS 250TH BIRTHDAY

WEST BROOKFIELD, Sept. 21.—This is the greatest day this community and the ones adjacent to it have ever known, for it is the 250th anniversary of the settlement of Brookfield and the beginning of history in a large portion of central Massachusetts. It was celebrated not only by West Brookfield, but by all the other Brookfields and all the country round.

The big feature of the day was a parade, and the order of march was as follows:

Head marshals and police.

Worcester Brass Band, 24 pieces.

School children of North Brookfield, New Braintree, Brookfield and West Brookfield.

Any floats containing school children.

Fire departments of North Brookfield, West Brookfield and Brookfield.

400 Children in Line.

There were 400 children in the line of march and when Barr J. Merriam, superintendent of schools in Brookfield, East and North Brookfield, and Chauncey C. Ferguson, superintendent of the school district embracing Sturbridge, New Braintree and West Brookfield told the executive committee of twenty that the pupils would form such a big regiment it was voted to give them the head of the line. They are the hope of the country, and after them came the Grand Army men, who saved it on the battlefield.

Theodore C. Bates is chairman of the executive committee which has worked very hard to make the celebration worthy of the event. There was a banquet served in the dining tent, which, with additions, held 800, but was far too small to accommodate the throng. Thousands assembled here to witness the parade and view other celebration proceedings. Many of them are natives or former residents of this section of the State, and not a few journeyed long distances to be present.

The celebration brought about many family reunions. Many homes and buildings are decorated in patriotic colors and the town is alive with excitement. No automobiles were permitted in the parade, but there were scores of them here. Hundreds of people came to West Brookfield to-day in touring cars. There has never been so many vehicles of all kinds seen here.

Some extent of the crowd may be gained when it is stated that Secretary Harold A. Foster sent out 6,000 invitations to attend the celebration. Thousands of others came without one.

One of the most interesting features of the day was the reproduction of the siege of the fortified house on historic Foster's Hill, which was one of the stirring events in King Philip's War. In the mimic fight to-day Sachem John F. Fitzgerald of the Quabong Tribe of Red Men was the big chief of the attacking party. The same tribe had a float in the parade and forty members rode on horseback with it.

Nearly every house along the line of the parade is bright with flags or bunting.

Decorations Elaborate.

Ye old tavern, built in 1760, bears portraits of George Washington, who was one of the distinguished personages entertained at the inn, and the decorations at the West Brookfield fire department headquarters include a large picture of a fire scene. The portrait of Abraham Lincoln, with the log cabin and White House in the same painting, are in the decorations at Merriam Public Library.

The exhibit of antique articles in the rooms of the West Brookfield branch of the Quabong Historical Society in Merriam Library is an interesting feature. Albert W. Bliss, West Brookfield, and assistants are in charge during the day.

The sham engagement of the Indians and settlers on Foster hill, representing the attack upon the blockhouse besieged in King Philip's war, August 24, 1675, takes the visitor to a site thickly studded with historic interest.

Many Historical Sites.

The well at which Major Thomas Wilson was shot during the siege in 1675, is in the front yard of Carlton D. Richardson, past master of the Massachusetts State Grange, and is covered with a flat stone.

Indian Rock, behind which the savages secreted themselves and fired at Wilson, is on a hill in a field, south of the road, opposite the Richardson home.

The site of the first and second meeting house, which stood on the north side of the road, is marked.

The first place of worship of the colonists was burned August 4, 1675, when the Indians fled in the siege.

The second church was dedicated Oct. 16, 1717, and was the third formally organized church in Worcester county.

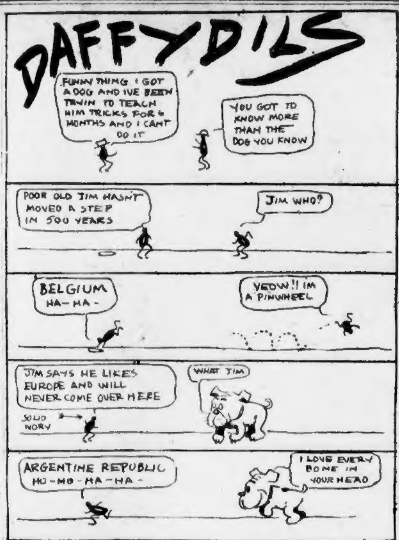

Whitefield's rock, from the top of which George Whitefield preached, in 1741, stands on Foster hill, near the main highway, nearly opposite the site of the old Foster house.

Near the driveway leading to the house of C. D. Richardson was the location of the fortified house besieged by the Indians in 1675.

About 100 rods north of the site of the meetinghouses there are faint traces of what was probably the first burial place of the settlement.

The spot is now crossed by a stone wall built apparently in some part of the gravestones, but it bears features which seem to fix it as the first cemetery of Brookfield's pioneer dead.

Occupying a central position in the village is Ye old tavern, built in 1760 by David Hitchcock. President George Washington, President John Adams and General Lafayette were among the distinguished personages received at the inn.

GLOVER WIDOW AND BROTHER IN FIGHT FOR HOME

Mrs. Lillian M. Glover, widow of Clarence F. Glover, who was murdered in his laundry at Waltham last November, is in a bitter clash in the courts with her brother, Toby Le Blanc, over the ownership of the Waltham property in which the Glovers lived and in which the widow still resides.

The property is in the name of Toby Le Blanc. Mrs. Glover has tried to get it in her own name, asserting that it was her money that bought it and that Toby has held it only as a trustee.

Now the brother comes forward and through his lawyers, E. H. Savory and J. D. Carney, flatly denies al of the allegations of his sister, relative to the property.

Bought the Property.

In his answer Toby says that on January 9, 1908, he purchased of William J. Pierce the property described in the bill and that he paid the entire $5,500 to Pierce, and that the plaintiff, his sister, had no interest in or furnished or paid no portion of the consideration. He denies that his sister made the purchase for him, and he affirms that he is the sole owner and not the naked trustee, as his sister alleges.

Toby further denies that Mrs. Glover has occupied the property as her own, and that if she has let the lower tenement, and received rent for it she did so as his agent. He furthermore denies that he was requested to convey the property over to Mrs. Glover before the beginning of the suit and that she, at her own expense, had the property repaired and insured.

Was Under Arrest.

Toby Le Blanc was taken to Waltham by the police shortly after the tragedy to testify in the hearing of Hattie Le Blanc who was arrested on the charge of shooting Glover. He refused to answer questions and was locked up until he changed his mind.

Toby was questioned as to his movements at the time of the shooting and convinced the police that he was not in Waltham at the time.

ARMED MOB SEEKS SLAYER SUSPECT

LOUISVILLE, Miss., Sept. 21.—Bands of men, armed with Winchester rifles, thronged the streets here to-day awaiting a leader to storm the jail where a young white man, named Permenter, a member of a prominent family is detained, charged with murdering Miss Janie Sharp, an eighteen-year-old girl. Following the arrest of Permenter the excitement became so intense and the threats so open that Permenter was hidden by the authorities.

FAY RALLIES.

Rallies in the interest of ex-Representative Tom Fay, candidate for the Senate from Wards 18, 19 and 22, will be held to-night at the corner of Tremont and Cabot streets, at 8 o'clock, and Longwood avenue and Phillips street at 9:30. Fay will speak on Timilty's contracts, hours worked by his men, and wages paid them, and his political record for the last twenty years.

STATE ST. NEWS OF INTEREST TO THE INVESTORS

State Street is suffering from a surfeit of rumors, most of them of a downright bad or equivocal nature, but is taking the matter calmly, having made up its mind to endure what it cannot help. This is true philosophy.

$ $ $

Intense dullness prevailed in the early trading, and some of the leading traders were forced to admit that it was still "the same old market" in which the speculator would have to content himself with small profits on one side or the other.

$ $ $

Investigation shows that the private borrowing demand for stocks is not more than moderate, while the regular loan crowd shows but little activity. This may be a trick on the part of the shorts to weaken the technical position by refraining from selling as the list strengthens.

$ $ $

Speculation is being repressed at this time because the banks are conservative. They do not care to see a runaway market in either direction. This militates against bull booms, but at the same time it guards against sudden drives by the shorts.

$ $ $

The better understanding in the bond market is taken as an indication of strength, in spite of the fact that after a severe depression in security prices stocks usually lead in the upturn. The bears say that bonds are favorites because investors are afraid of stocks.

$ $ $

It is stated on apparently good authority that the Steel Trust is getting in new orders only equal to half of what it manufactures. If this is really true the unfilled orders are being reduced at a rapid rate.

$ $ $

A still higher price was made for Tennessee Copper. The movement in it, as stated in this column yesterday, is due to realization of the profits from the sulphuric acid plant, on which $1,400,000 has been spent in the last two years, and $700,000 out of earnings. This plant, and a second unit, is expected to show a profit in about a year of $600,000, which would equal 3 per cent. on the stock.

$ $ $

Announcement that the Oregon Short Line would increase its capital stock about $72,000,000 led to an investigation that developed the fact that there have been some important conferences recently between the managers of the Hill lines and the Harriman lines. A more friendly feeling has developed between these systems, and traffic arrangements even closer than those now in force are believed to be in contemplation. It is known that the Great Northern expects a decision in important litigation in the Minnesota State courts within a few days. If the railroad should win it will be an important victory on certain points of physical valuation.

$ $ $

American Beet Sugar is the newest specialty to become excited in this dull market. Weird rumors were in circulation regarding it, and big earnings were hinted at, but officers of the company refused to say a word regarding the business of the company. They adopted exactly the attitude taken by the American Hide & Leather Company when the stock of that company was active on similar rumors a few weeks ago. Beet Sugar may be a good stock, but under the circumstances the public may beware of it. The public is tired of buying mysteries at advancing prices.

$ $ $

It is rumored that the American Express Company will be installed on the Great Northern lines, the company having done most of its own business heretofore. Such an installation would make necessary the purchase of about 50,000 shares of Great Northern by American Express Company interests. There is no official authority for making this statement, but the rumor is persistent. It is also rumored that by reason of the more friendly feeling between the Harriman and the Hill systems the Oregon Shore Line will be permitted to make important extensions in the Northwest without any opposition from the Hill people. This dovetails with the announcement of the stock issue made yesterday.

R. C. Jacobs of the firm of H. A. Brown & Company wires the home office as follows: "Have just returned from the property (Mazatan). Superintendent Wilson has been extremely conservative in his reports. There is ore everywhere. Present width of vein thirty feet with no indications of hanging wall. Just opened another pay of very high grade copper glance. Drift six feet in but total width unknown."

$ $ $

North Butte directors have declared a quarterly dividend of 30 cents a share, payable October 22 to stock of record October 8. Three months ago 30 cents was declared; a year ago $1.

$ $ $

Since March 1, when the stock of copper in English and French warehouses stood at 254,150,408 pounds, there had been to September 19 a decline of almost 40,000,000 pounds, or 15 per cent.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

UNION PACIFIC AGAIN LEADER

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—Union Pacific was again the moving spirit in the market in Wall Street to-day, leading with an advance of ⅝ of a point above the closing price. Other standard railroad shares and a few industrials scored fractional gains at the opening. These were wiped out, however, after the first fifteen minutes of trading during which a recession occurred.

Prices advanced again under a bullish movement. The losses were wiped out and fractional gains substituted. Early trading displayed a fair amount of activity, but later the market became stagnant. Southern Pacific, Northern Pacific and Great Northern were the prominent railroads that led the advance. Chesapeake and Ohio scored a gain of ¾ of a point in the first twenty minutes of trading. Steel showed evidence of an upward movement.

This advance can be traced to the reassurance of Judge Gary of the United States Steel corporation given in an optimistic interview. The defeat of vice-president Sherman in the up-State primaries had some effect on the market. Prices on the curb remained practically unchanged. In some instances, especially among the coppers, fractional gains were scored.

American shares sold at a slight advance in London. Trading in these stocks was very light.

CUSTOM HOUSE MEN ARE UNEASY

The dispatch from Washington that the Boston custom house will probably soon be investigated by special agents of the Treasury Department has caused a flutter among the local officials and their subordinates. Heads of departments, clerks, appraisers and inspectors are wondering where the lightning will strike. The younger men appointed through the civil service welcome such an examination because they think it means promotion for them. The older ones, however, who are said to have outlived their efficiency in executive positions, are anxious about their jobs.

Secretary McVeagh refuses to say definitely that an investigation has been ordered here, but it is known that he intends to have custom affairs examined in all the large ports. New York was first and it is expected that Boston will be next.

$100 LIQUOR FINE.

Pietro Toto of No. 19 Harvey street, West Newton, was to-day fined $100 in the Newton Court for alleged violation of the liquor law. He paid $50 and was given until October 12 to pay the balance. The police said that in a raid at Toto's home they seized 25 gallons of beer and three gallons of port wine.

Public Ownership of Merchant Marine

A correspondent asks the American to explain the meaning of the word "ship-subsidy," as applied to the proposed Congressional measures for the building up of an American merchant marine.

He says that most of the honest opposition to the Humphrey bill is due to a misunderstanding—that a good many people imagine that an attempt is being made to loot the public treasury in the interest of some private shipbuilding syndicate.

This correspondent is right in suggesting that the word "ship-subsidy," however justified by common usage both in this country and in Europe, is likely to convey a false impression as to the nature of what is proposed.

The truth is that the whole subject would be much more intelligible if it were stated as a proposition in Public Ownership.

In practical effect the Humphrey bill and all similar measures look to the acquisition by the national government of a part ownership in transoceanic ships.

The fundamental fact is that under existing conditions American private enterprise has woefully failed in the deep-sea carrying trade. It has been overwhelmed by a gigantic foreign monopoly—a monopoly so strong that it is able to exercise an exhausting taxing power over our foreign commerce.

In this emergency it becomes necessary to have recourse to the principle of public ownership.

The proposed "ship-subsidies" are nothing but the price that the government should pay for a partial ownership and control of American ships.

In return for the so-called subsidies the government would not only acquire the right to use the new ships for the carrying of the United States mails, but would also plan the architecture of the vessels in such manner that they would be fit for service as naval auxiliaries and would take possession of them for that purpose in case of war or other need.

The "subsidies" would buy for the government the regular use of the ships in the mail service. It would buy the contingent right to turn them into government transports or colliers. And it would buy a continuing control over them such as would make it impossible for them to enter into a shipping trust, or charge extortionate rates to American shippers.

This last advantage has never been sufficiently emphasised by those who invoke the aid of the government for the restoration of our merchant marine.

It should be understood that government aid means government control, and that so far from lending itself to private monopoly the proposed ship-subsidy plan will make private monopoly impossible.

Such is the unvarying experience of the chief maritime countries of Europe. They have all resorted to "ship-subsidies," and it is because of the partial public ownership of European ships that European shippers have acquired a well-nigh ruinous advantage over Americans.

Germany, for example, at the initiative of Prince Bismarck began in 1885 to create a merchant marine. The country has no first-rate harbors, and it is at a great natural disadvantage as compared with the United States.

In 1885 Germany had less than 30 per cent. as much ocean tonnage as we had. She is now, next to England, the greatest maritime country in the world.

Germany now levies enormous shipping taxes upon the American people, because the German people are for all practical purposes part owners of the Hamburg-American line and the North German Lloyd.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

THE WELLESLEY STATION

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Why is it that the commuters from the town of Wellesley are driven out of the passenger station every morning because it is used for a baggage room at this season of the year to accommodate the trunks of the returning students of Jana Hall and Wellesley College? The trunks are piled so high inside the station that it is well nigh impossible to get near the ticket office. The railroad should be compelled to enlarge the small baggage room, as the hats of the students require larger trunks than ever. A COMMUTER.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Permit me to express my idea of an article written by Dr. Parkhurst about Dr. Crippen. He says: "Why does society seek his life? Why kill him?" It will not improve him, and will do his murdered wife no good.

Think of what would become of this world if all those intending to commit a crime would know that they will get off with twenty five to fifty years, or even a life sentence.

Capital punishment restrains many cowards, who fear conviction and death in the chair. B. SIMON.

THE BALLOT AND THE HOME

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Mrs. William Lowell Putnam says, in a recent article against woman suffrage:

"A woman's best effort must be given to her own home and what makes for the betterment of homes the world over."

Judge Ben B. Lindsey of the Denver Juvenile Court says of equal suffrage:

"Certainly it has not made women any less womanly or any less motherly. It does not take any mother from her home duties to spend ten minutes or going to the polls, casting her vote and returning to the home of her home; but during that ten minutes she wields a power which is doing more to protect that home, and all other homes, than any power or influence in Colorado." ALICE STONE BLACKWELL.

Chilmark.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Note your editorial about the human race living without sleep. This is very simple. The human race can live without sleep at the present time. We live on because we do not breathe properly during our waking hours; our minds are so intent on our work that it interferes with our respiration and we take only little short dabs of breath and at long intervals a few long, deep breaths. We do not inhale enough oxygen to burn out the impurities accumulated in the blood. This acts as a narcotic poison, causing sleep.

During sleep the mind is entirely at rest (all dreams occur during the half awake period only), the heart throbs with its steady beat and the breath is inhaled in long, deep, rhythmic intervals. Each throb of the heart throws the blood in the lung cells. Each deep breath meets it and burns out the impurities, and in the morning we awake refreshed and purified. Now, if we could keep up that deep, rhythmic breathing during each hour of our lives, our bodies would be purified and there would be no morbid poison accumulating in our blood to make us drowsy. We would need no sleep.

Now, how are we to keep up this regular rhythmic breathing? Easy! A little two-cylinder air pump, each cylinder inserted into a nostril of the nose, operated by a small electric motor, which gets its power from a small storage battery concealed in the pocket, or by wound in the huge hair rolls and puffs they wear. This little air pump could be suspended from our ears like our eyeglasses. Think what a glorious conquest would be opened to a future J. D. Rockefeller, if, after he should own everything on the surface of the earth, he could buy up the air over each State of the Union, attach motors to our breathing apparatus and sell us the sweet air we would breathe at $ per cubic foot. J. W. T.

"FORTY-TWO," DON'T!

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Wilfred Black relegates "Forty-two" to the ranks of chaperone and wall-flower. To those whom it may suit, very well; or to those on the still "man hunt," and unsuccessful at the pastime, having therefore a grouch against the world in general, very well, too! It is but seldom, though, a woman who is an expert swimmer, an adept at tennis or golf, but who finds the joy, pleasure and exercise to be found in those sports, ample recompense. And it is but rare, also, that one excelling in these health giving recreations to be willing to forego their benefit just because there is no "mere man" on the docket, to ogle, simper or flatter, and in nine cases out of ten, ridicule behind her back.

The writer is no "man hater," is, in fact, rather partial to the society of the stronger sex, but—dear Forty-two, DON'T give up your athletic exercise until you HAVE to. Keep young in body as well as in soul, and sometime you will meet Forty-five, yes, even Forty who thinks and feels just as you do. So DON'T sit in a corner and allow your joints to ossify.

Why, I know a heart that was won between a springboard and the surface of the water. BY ONE WHO KNOWS.

THE PRICE OF GARTERS

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

With all due respect to Dr. Parkhurst, I consider myself, and hope I am, "intelligently and exclusively a feminine woman." However, I have the courage of my convictions, and believe that women should have an intelligent knowledge of "why and wherefores" as well as "ways and means."

Therefore, I request you to answer the following question:

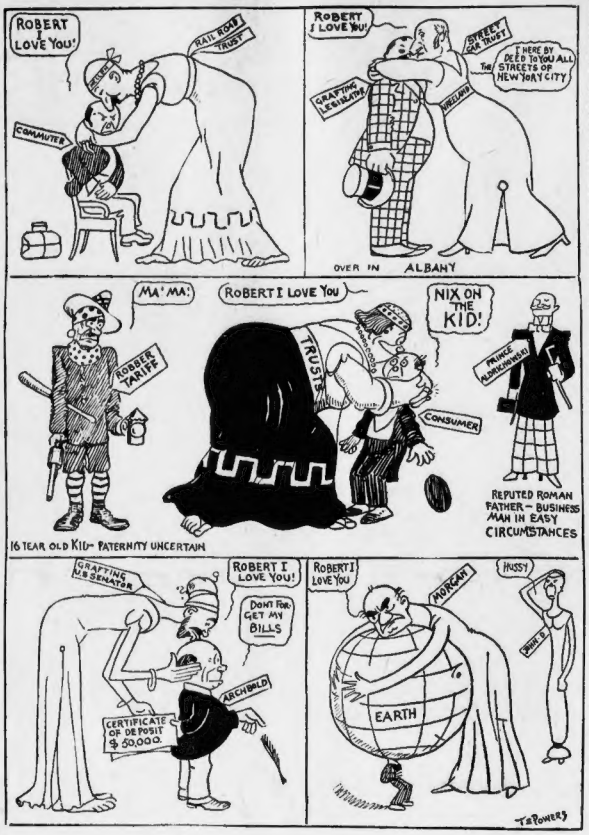

Where does the extra penny go that mothers are paying this Fall for the garters of the school girl?

I purchased from one of the largest house in the country two pairs of garters for sixteen cents a pair that have until now retailed for fifteen cents. My two little girls each require eight pairs of garters a year—that makes sixteen cents extra on one small article for one small family this year. If all the little girls of school age are paying this extra penny, what is your estimate of the amount of pennies thus handed out that are unaccounted for, and who is benefited? A little light on this subject may make mothers and some ministers "sit up and take notice." M. F.

He Writes About "Who's Loony Now"

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

I SEE there has been a prize offered, Pa sed, for the best song called Who's Looney Now? The prise is five hundred dollars, sed Pa, & the way I figger it is that I am a sucker if I dosnt go after it. With this song which I have wrote, I'a sed, I will knock them all ded & win the five hundred dollars besides. Jest think how many cigars I cen buy with that five hundred dollars, Pa sed. I can live like a prince, & treet you like a princess. Every time you go out in a taxicab you can pay the check yureself, & you won't have to pay for the folks that you invite to the game, beekause you won't invite them aggens.

Well, sed Ma, what is this wunderful new song that you have wrote? I think you sed that the naim of it was Who's Loony Now? I shuld dverly love to hear it, Ma sed. So then Pa recsited the poem with he had wrote. This is the way it went:

Who's loony now? The twilight falls,
Out of the west the sunset calls.
Following always after the day,
Just as the calves and heifers stray.
Following after their mother cow:
Who's loony now, who's loony now?

Well sed Ma, I hosp you doan think that pitiful song is going to win you any prise, do you? It sounds awful, sed Ma, it is prodjy one of the worst songs wich I have ever heard.

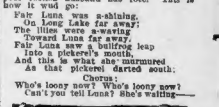

Well, sed Pa, what kind of a song wud you rite to win this prize? I suppose you think that you are the verse riting kid. Kick in and show us that you are thare. A flash of speed, kid, a flash of speed.

Well, sed Ma, this is the only kind of a song that I wud rite if I was going to rite a song at all. I will admit, Ma sed, that I have ritten a few rotten songs in my day, much aggrest the wishes of my deer old mother, who wanted me to be a lady paper hanger, but the one song that I wud rite now wud be called Who's Loony Now? the saim as the song my poor foolish husband has rote. This is how it wud go:

Fair Luna was a-shining,
On Long Lake far away;
The lilies were a-waving
Toward Luna far away.
Fair Luna saw a bullfrog leap
Into a pickerel's mouth,
And this is what she murmured
As that pickerel darted south;

Chorus:

Who's loony now? Who's loony now?
Can't you tell Luna? She's waiting—

Now, sed Ma, I think that will do for you. I think, also, sed Ma, that you need a nice night's rest more than you need anything else. If you keep running around with that sporty Freddy Lee, sed Ma, you won't be shel to stand up long enuf to stand off the tailor.
